

while asleep

gut voch, everyone.

I wanted to know whether I should count this as a slip or a fall--I'm inclined to count it as a slip. I spilled seed while I was asleep, and woke up immediately after this occurred. I want to call this accidental, but I know that it was at least partially my own fault, since I had treif thoughts before falling asleep. And I still remember the dream I had while this occurred, which was also treif--but hey, I wasn't fully conscious while asleep. However, I hold that the fact that I had a dream with treif content (and hence wasted seed) is most likely the result of my treif thoughts before falling asleep and thus my own fault. --so is this a slip or fall? I want to say slip. (for purposes of the 90day chart)--I'm not yet on the chart because I'm only clean as of April 28. The aforementioned occurrence was on April 30 (Shabbos morning). Aside from it, I'm still clean from the 28th.

And even with all of this considered, I recognize that I nonetheless incurred the spiritual damage from this--whether or not it was intentional. I made the declaration specified in Kitzur Shulchan Aruch, chapter 151, paragraph 5.

Also, I noticed that at the bottom of my post, my IP address is displayed. If possible, I'd like to hide it--how do I do that?

Thanks in advance to anyone who posts!

Hey Shomerbris,

If it was a wet dream then there's it's not even a slip since you can't really control them. If you were indulging in porn during the day that led to lewd thoughts at night then you are at fault, but if that's not the case then there's nothing to worry about in my opinion.

Also, do you feel physically drained after emitting seed and did you touch yourself in any way during your sleep? A natural wet dream should not leave you feeling any weaker than before.

@DesertLion

Thanks for your reply! In that case, it was (at most) a slip.

That was indeed the case.

I have not seen p*** since 3 days before the occurrence. However, I (through my own bechira) had lustful thoughts right before I fell asleep that time.

This time I did not feel drained in any way--actually was strong, as in I really felt angry about it. I always sleep with my hands above (at least) my waist, often adjacent to my head. (I sleep on my stomach, though--I know that's assur, but it's a habit formed ages ago.)

So then I'll conclude it was a slip because, as you say, I "can't really control them." But that would mean that it was ratzon Hashem, which is an even weirder question.

A wet dream is not a fall.

A wet dream is neither a slip nor a fall.

Regarding lying on your stomach, aside from the Halacha, there's a common sense reason not to (consciously) do that - Hameivin Yavin.

It means "one who understands [i.e. who has an understanding mind] will understand [the point being made]."

Here is my point: Chazal say that a man should neither go to sleep on his back nor on his stomach. Apparently, going to sleep on one's back is more likely to lead to Zera L'vatala than going to sleep on one's side. I'm not sure why, but I'll take Chazal's word for it. When it comes to going to sleep on one's stomach, however, common sense dictates that this can lead to Zera L'vatala.

By the way, Chazal were only talking about what position to be in when going to sleep. Once we're already sleeping, we are not held responsible if we change positions.

Stop looking at porn, period...for starters. You do not need to.

Just a thought.

ok maybe its just because i am now officially past my sell-by date, but i have had two recent nighttime slips, which were quite intense but led to no emission...

The weirdest thing is that one of them actually involved my wife which is doubly amazing given the (cough) way she feels about me. And no before you ask I didn't wake up with a black eye.

but what is my responsibility here? zero porn and I am really avoiding doing any looking. I sleep on my side, always wake up on my back.

5770,

Those episodes sound like they were neither slips nor falls.

Keep up the great work!

That makes me wonder: how can one tell the difference between being a "dry drunk" and being sober? Is it merely the duration? I can imagine that one can be a dry drunk for bouts of a few days at a time (certainly happens with me), but I guess there's no such thing as being truly sober for a short period? Is that the difference?
