i understand you, i was just trying to bring that out of you if you try desperatley to do something and you have a problem holding you back & its bothering you, then you start looking for help, and you ASK, how can i do this & this, i have such & such of a problem

so back to sq. 1

for instance you can ask: how can i avoid shuch & such a nisoyen?

no shame, nobody knows you, everybody is trying to help

we are all in the same parshe

You are NOT alone. There are so many people here, with a wide variety of experience and viewpoints, waiting to help you. Ask away, and someone is sure to have an answer.

KVT & KOT!

Hi, just popping in to bring your reply count 1 closer to a zillion

Gevura!

Friend,

you're not alone. Tonight many many people are reading your posts and thinking of best ways to reply. So it'll take 'em a little longer...

Imagine yourself in a valley. There are thousands of alligators trying to cross the valley and you are standing there with a shovel knocking them alligators back out. Now, you can keep fighting the alligators till they overwhelm you, or you can spend every waking moment (when you are not actually fighting) digging a canal around the valley that will take the alligators away.

The canal is all the useful tips that this wonderful website has to offer. Start digging the canal, and if occasionally you're overrun by alligators.....nu, so you get up and keep digging and eventually them alligators will stop coming.

Did you have a chance to read Handbook? Nu?

Emunah17,

I followed this site for many months before writing any posts. I even guided many people to this site while I myself stood on the sidelines. Recently, a very wise man told me " just write what you feel" and I haven't stopped writing. So I say to you " just write what you feel" which it seems you are starting to do in this post. When you struggle share it, when you feel happy share it, when you feel sad, share it. There's a lot of love and true caring flowing around this forum, just post and you'll feel it.

Yossi
