

Any new idea's for the GYE network?

Posted by Tzvi S. - 28 Dec 2011 08:19

Please post below any NEW idea's you might have for GYE to implement that can help bring Jews closer to hashem!!!

=====

=====

Re: Any new idea's for the GYE network?

Posted by tehillimzugger - 28 Dec 2011 12:44

public awareness and education in chareidi ^[i hate that term] schools? is it possible?

=====

=====

Re: Any new idea's for the GYE network?

Posted by struggler - 29 Dec 2011 01:00

If possible, for people who are not ready to attend live meetings, but need more help than peer to peer forum, to get help / advice from a professional (psychologist). This could be a premium service were you could charge for the service and a shink would work with a small groups or one on one over email / chat / private forum. Thanks!

=====

=====

Re: Any new idea's for the GYE network?

Posted by kosher - 29 Dec 2011 18:17

I don't know if these qualify as NEW ideas, but:

1. A dedicated forum for people who, at least at this point in their life, are not struggling with P and MB, only the daily challenges of the streets and society that we live and work in. I imagine that this forum would have much less (if any at all) focus on the 12 steps and such a system (I am not recommending taking away anything that we currently have, just adding).

2. Perhaps we could have more active moderating/editing of the forums to ensure that everything is appropriate to be out there in this public a manner (I am not offering my services, so I certainly don't hold it against anyone else who doesn't...)

3. The preceding would probably be helpful to get more public Rabbinic backing that would help attract people who need it to the site. (I know most people who are here for a while can't figure out any legitimate reasons to be hesitant, but for someone unfamiliar, I can understand a genuine hesitation).

=====

Re: Any new idea's for the GYE network?
Posted by the.guard - 29 Dec 2011 18:38

kosher wrote on 29 Dec 2011 18:17:

1. A dedicated forum for people who, at least at this point in their life, are not struggling with P and MB, only the daily challenges of the streets and society that we live and work in. I imagine that this forum would have much less (if any at all) focus on the 12 steps and such a system (I am not recommending taking away anything that we currently have, just adding).

Coming up soon on the new prevention website: www.guardyoureyes.com/prevention

=====

Re: Any new idea's for the GYE network?
Posted by gibbor120 - 30 Dec 2011 13:28

struggler wrote on 29 Dec 2011 01:00:

If possible, for people who are not ready to attend live meetings, but need more help than peer to peer forum, to get help / advice from a professional (psychologist). This could be a premium service were you could charge for the service and a shink would work with a small groups or one on one over email / chat / private forum. Thanks!

Have you checked this out guardyoureyes.com/therapists/item/katz-elya ?

=====

=====