

$10,000 for staying clean for the next 24 hours . . .

Posted by Kedusha - 28 Dec 2011 22:57

---

All right, I don't think anyone thought this is a real offer. But, use your imagination and pretend that it is. Let's say that, if you could stay clean for the next 24 hours, you would receive $10,000 tax free, and if you could stay clean for a week, you'd get $100,000. For a month? $500,000. For 90 days? $1 million - tax free! The only catch is that it's a one-time opportunity, which will never repeat itself.

So here's the question: What precautions would you take to make sure that you stay clean?
And, there's a follow-up question - can anyone figure out what it is?

=====
=====

Re: $10,000 for staying clean for the next 24 hours . . .

Posted by Kedusha - 29 Dec 2011 14:23

---

I have a theory as to why no one has responded yet . . .

=====
=====

Re: $10,000 for staying clean for the next 24 hours . . .

Posted by Humpty Dumpty - 29 Dec 2011 15:02

---

With such an incentive, i don't think i would have to take any more precautions!

=====
=====

Re: $10,000 for staying clean for the next 24 hours . . .

Posted by Kedusha - 29 Dec 2011 15:34

---

Since, other than Willgetout, no one responded yet, I'll share my follow-up question.

Unlike Willgetout, my assumption is that some serious precautions would be in order, because the amount of money at stake would require me to succeed at all costs. I simply could not risk failing.

My follow-up question is: If I would take serious precautions if big bucks were at stake, what is stopping me from taking the same precautions now? I think this is a good question, even without considering the fact that, by comparison, the benefits of staying clean make these financial incentives seem more like 1 cent, 10 cents, 50 cents, and one dollar.

=====

Re: $10,000 for staying clean for the next 24 hours . . .
Posted by gibbor120 - 29 Dec 2011 17:07

---

Kedusha wrote on 29 Dec 2011 15:34:

Since, other than Willgetout, no one responded yet, I'll share my follow-up question.

... oh yeah and figuring out how to

=====

Re: $10,000 for staying clean for the next 24 hours . . .
Posted by the.guard - 29 Dec 2011 18:54

---

I like the moshol! ;D

(Lucky the million is tax-free, otherwise fugetaboutit)

And, there's a follow-up question - can anyone figure out what it is?

What what is?

=====

Re: $10,000 for staying clean for the next 24 hours . . .
Posted by gibbor120 - 29 Dec 2011 18:59

---

Kedusha wrote on 29 Dec 2011 15:34:

My follow-up question is: If I would take serious precautions if big bucks were at stake, what is stopping me from taking the same precautions now? I think this is a good question, even without considering the fact that, by comparison, the benefits of staying clean make these financial incentives seem more like 1 cent, 10 cents, 50 cents, and one dollar.

=====

Re: $10,000 for staying clean for the next 24 hours . . .
Posted by Kedusha - 29 Dec 2011 19:49

---

Thank you, Gibor.

=====