

I need help, please

Posted by some_guy - 13 May 2012 16:44

I have not done this befor, both the posting and the opening up, but I will try to do my best. Please tell me if anything I post is inappropriate in any way. I am not married and a little younger than most GYE members. My family is not religious, but I have been trying to be for about a year now. Befor that, I would masterbate whenever I was stessed. I did it almost every night. I've never even taken drugs or alchohol (except for kiddish) so masterbating was my only coping method. You have to understand that because I was secular I did not see anything wrong with it. Well, when I learned from my Rabbi that Jews should not do that, I said I would just stop. Lot easier said than done. Since trying to stop, I have been able to go only 2-3 days without falling again. And when I do fall, I get so depressed that I end up falling again and again. My Rabbi always tells me that it is natural to have these urges and I am better than everyone else for just trying to stop. Is it also natural to not be able to stop. Why do I lack the self control to just stop? I get so depressed after falling that I see a theropist to deal with my depression. I have never told him why I am always so depressed, partly because I don't feel comfortable with him. I just don't know what to do. Sometimes I feel that I should I just give-up and trust that these felling will disappear when I get older. Does that make sence, or is my evil inclination trying to trick me? Addiction is defined as not being able to stop a dangerous coping method because of the users dependance on it. That describes my perfectly. Can I really be an addict when I am only 16 years old? I just don't know, I don't know. Please if anyone can help me in any way I would be forever grateful. I just don't understand. Please, I need help.

=====
=====

Re: I need help, please

Posted by some_guy - 12 Jun 2014 22:14

I graduated from High School last week. Now I walk to Shul everyday and don't have anywhere near the amount of stress that school gave me. Next month I am going to visit a yeshiva. Hopefully, I will be enrolled there by the fall. Everything just seems to be going better. 2 night ago I was self-stimulating, but I stopped myself before anything major happened. I am so fortunate that Hashem is giving me so much strength.

-Eliyahu/Elias/some_guy

=====
=====

Re: I need help, please

Posted by Pidaini - 13 Jun 2014 16:24

Gevaldig!!! It should all go with hatzlacha!!

Was that an answer to my question?

=====

=====

Re: I need help, please

Posted by some_guy - 21 Jun 2014 03:23

Have a good shabbos!

=====

=====

Re: I need help, please

Posted by Pidaini - 22 Jun 2014 07:28

Have a good week!!

=====

=====

Re: I need help, please

Posted by some_guy - 16 Aug 2014 12:56

It is 5 were I am. I am 1 hour clean.

=====

=====

Re: I need help, please

Posted by Dov - 17 Aug 2014 15:32

Hi Elias,

You wrote before that you were "so glad Hashem is giving me so much strength". Well, I guess He is not giving you that much strength, after all. That's not a put down, in case you were wondering, but just a simple observation.

It is not strength you need, at all. All you and I need is a simple gift of some freedom from our own nutty and useless desires, just for this minute, this day. You and I do not need to be given freedom forever, and not even for tomorrow, and not even for later today! For example, when you go to the bathroom: would pushing a lot harder now give you freedom from having to go to the bathroom tomorrow, or even later on, today? I think not. Right?

This is a hard thing for many GYE guys to accept. They - we - have been bitten by the 'religious glory bug' - we want to be heroes and nothing less. Sad. It's just lust - spiritual lust and self-centered childishness hiding behind yiddishkeit and misquoting a RMB"M or Mussar shmooze they heard long ago that kindled a fire of some sort.

Same thing exact thing here. I am not joking. You can't eat, breath, or go to the bathroom for tomorrow...same with sobriety. Today's sobriety is a free gift from G-d Himself, and nothing I will ever be able to be 'good' enough to deserve. It does not prove my 'strength' and that's it. It just 'is'. And my only credit is that I ask for it - and I accept it. Not much.

And BTW, 'One day at a time' is not a trick of some sort...though many use it that way, as though we fool ourselves that we are just holding on without it for today...silly and useless fooling, that is. We surely cannot hold our breath forever, no matter how hard we tell ourselves "we are only holding it for this minute, one minute at a time" - right?

And all the 'strength' in the world that Elias gets today, will not make Elias 'strong' enough for tomorrow. You seem to be proving that to yourself day after day without my help...nu.

So I ask you to consider quitting the fight to finally be Superman and quitting pretending you are 'powerful' by holding back. I say you are not. You are smart, surely. You are good, surely. Strength you need very little of, to do this. For G-d is the one who does it and you just let Him. Its a matter of humility and calmness.

As long as you see yourself as 'strong', you invite failure tomorrow...not because of 'gayvoh', but simply because it is a lie. But it does indeed require some humility not to lie...

Relax, enjoy being clean today - it is a free gift from Hashem to His beloved child. That is a thing to be very happy about, if you ask me!

=====

Re: I need help, please

Posted by cordnoy - 04 Mar 2015 02:51

Hey Some_guy!

Welcome back!

Perhaps post here, so people can familiarize themselves with your history.

How've ya' been?

Lookin' forward to hearin' more.

=====

Re: I need help, please

Posted by some_guy - 04 Mar 2015 03:26

Hi. I am just posting this to 'break the ice.'

=====

Re: I need help, please

Posted by serenity - 04 Mar 2015 03:52

Welcome back! Glad you broke the ice and bumped your thread back up, you're giving me chizuk!

=====

=====

Re: I need help, please

Posted by cordnoy - 04 Mar 2015 04:02

serenity wrote:

Welcome back! Glad you broke the ice and bumped your thread back up, you're giving me chizuk!

Ahem

=====

=====

Re: I need help, please

Posted by cordnoy - 04 Mar 2015 04:04

some_guy wrote:

Hi. I am just posting this to 'break the ice.'

Great move!

Most of the fellows here won't remember you, but there's still a few from your time left.

b'hatzlachah

=====
=====

Re: I need help, please

Posted by some_guy - 06 Mar 2015 01:57

I had a good day today.

=====
=====

Re: I need help, please

Posted by some_guy - 10 Mar 2015 02:14

I updated my 90 chart a minute ago and discovered that this has been my 6th day clean. I would not say that it has been easy, but it is not nearly as hard as I thought it would be.

some_guy / Elias / Eliyahu

=====
=====

Re: I need help, please

Posted by serenity - 10 Mar 2015 02:43

Your problem is not P&M, it is the solution to your problems. And you're right, you need to stop struggling, surrender and stop trying to save yourself, because you cannot save yourself. Lust is cunning baffling and powerful and you have to get out of the fight with it, admit that you are helpless in the face of lust and surrender your attempts at control. You also need to find another solution to your problems. P & M is obviously not working for you, or is it? That's actually a good question. Are you upset that P & M works for you and that disgusts you or is it just not working for you? Is it making your life unmanageable? Maybe it isn't. Because if it isn't making your life unmanageable, and you're just upset that your not a tzadik, then that's just ego.

Today I was lusting. I could not control it myself. Here is what I did: 1. I surrendered to the fact that I cannot defeat it. 2. I said 3 prayers to Hashem to ask him to remove the feeling. 3. I made 4 phone calls to program people and to family. If I would instead tried to fight it, I would have failed for sure. because if I tried to fight it, it means I have to engage it and I cannot engage lust.

We need to forget our selves, forget about our self pity and ego, and get honest and open up to real people.

"Words which emanate from the heart, enter the heart"

Hatzlacha!

=====
=====