Posted by rt - 12 Jul 2012 23:17

Well, I thought, I have to share it.

my plan for the next week: (how to stay sober, from friday 13 july til friday 20 july)

- 1.shmirat eynayim. knas for histaklus: 5 sec atzimas eynayim on spot, if not 1 € to tzedoke
- 2.shmirat machshovo. not to think about this very cute, just cute or even not even cute shikzas out there. if not, for each "time" 10 euro tzedoke
- 3.each day at least 20min GYE (exept forum),. if not, for each day 20 euro tzedoke.
- 4.before each nefila to read all this 90.000 or so reasons not to act out (started by steeble). if not, 50 € tzedoke
- 5.after each nefila 50 euro to tzedoka.

hagaha:biish'at nefila lo shayach numero dos (2)

heara: dawn to haShem.

hopefully i will not have to give all my money to tzedaka :o (at least, not bevause of that)

good night chevra, R"T

No, no. I am not taking the guard away. The whole purpose of this "closing eyes"-issue was to convince myself, that I shouldn't gaze at them. After 1 month I hope it's clear to me. The moment I'll see the shemirah goes down, I'll start again.

Hm. I do takke feel that my shemiras eynaim became weaker. I am mekabel to close my eyes again. for 10 sec (but not when i am on bike).

Will I always have to do it? grrr..

I was trying to improve my shemiras eynaim for 1 month and believe me i was pretty good in it. was.

then i wanted to see if it goes without the knas. and well. now i have major difficulties.

have to start again from the beginning.

RT,

In this battle we fight, Shmiras Einayim is the front lines. The glance, the second look, the staring, have become ingrained habits that need to be broken. It needs to be a constant, conscious, effort. It's draining and exhausting. And it can never be perfect, and that can be so discouraging. Then we get burnt out, and stop putting the energy into it, and we start slipping without realizing it. Then we realize what has happened, and we need to re-strengthen our fences. We need to form new habits, of not looking where we don't need to, and of averting our gaze from the things that fascinate us so strongly. It takes lots of time and hard work to make that change.

So hang in there and keep working at it. Don't be discouraged when you slip, expecting instant perfection is a recipe for disappointment. Every single time you successfully avert your gaze, you are etching the new good behavior a little deeper into your psyche. Be proud of each success, think of it as a little Korban to Hashem, a sacrifice of your inner urge just for that moment.

I'm writing to myself as much as to you. I've been at this for well over a year and I have gone through the cycle of ups and downs many times. But I know that it is the key to staying clean, and I must put all my effort into it.

Hatzlacha Rabba and KOMB!!!! (Monstuh' Biking)

Gevura!

You know guys. There is this concept we hear here so many times "one day at a time"

Efshar this shtikkle of a thought was already spoken out, but I am not aware of it so i'll post it here:

lich'ure this idea was invented by moshe rabeinu!

haShem told him his name "ek'ye asher ek'ye" and moshe rabeinu said to him "haShem! it's enough to mention one trouble at a time" (was recently on daf yomi).
