dear friends,

just a suggestion,

how about if we set times, when each person is available to be on guard, so that if someone has an emergency call we can be of help? if each person can donate a time it would be great. prob. during the most common times in each time zone would be great. ie. evening time in each

Here's a man with vision. My kind of guy.

One day, I dream that GYE will have a whole network of hotlines, 24 hours a day, for people to call in and get chizuk and talk it out, anywhere in the world. This is just one of the things we plan to do when we find that "big donor". :D

time zone...

can we start by donating the time. I am up for that. We can make a free phone conference code a central number and on person can remain in the phone line

We're getting somewhere...

Any more takers?

TrYiNg wrote on 16 Sep 2009 01:26:

I think its a great idea, sturggle. Thanks for getting it off the ground.. I'm here all night Us can you give us endpoints?

Trying,

like from 7pm - 6am?

Uri,

would you like to make some specific time commitments?

Anyone who got to know me a bit, would know that my sleep patterns are pretty messed up too (believe it or not, possibly more than TrYiNg's). When I move to NY next week I'll try to balance out and sign up for a few hours during the night or the wee hours of the early morning.

i personally know very well that tomim's schedule is wacked.

i dont think i fully grasp the extent of it.

sorry, cant really be a fair judge here.

Actually TrYiNg, I said "possibly" because I think you're still in a stage where it's considered to be "fun" or "strong of you" to stay up. I didn't want to outrightly grab the gold metal out of you hand. But seriously speaking, this is no joke. I'm a severe case of a workaholic and if I don't work on this it will take full control of my life. If you only knew where I stand, you might be able to hit the bottom while still on top. I don't think my work-habits are unjustified; I'm a CEO (owner) of a large international business in its early stages, and I'm trying to push it forward before I get married. But still, that's no excuse to surrender my life to the business. Some of this is absolutely necessary for the development of my company, but it's been largely overdone.

If you'd ask me, the reason I work the way I do, is so later, when I get married and everything is in motion, I'll be able to withdraw from my work setting and devote more time to my life - my family. Honestly, I doubt that will actually happen if I don't outrightly take back control, and I'm terrified of what this will bring me. This is one of the reasons I'm moving to NY - I'll have more opportunity to withdraw from work and do other things, only to work within a very strict schedule and framework.

I'm sorry for being such a poor sport. While I still try to joke about it with my friends, I just don't think it's funny anymore.

It is. People actually are petrified of me when they hear it.

Me neither. (but its still fun to joke about it :D)
