

I need honest opinions

Posted by the.guard - 07 Jan 2009 22:41

I need some honest feedback guys. On the one hand, there's always so much to say. On the other hand, maybe making it long causes people not to bother reading it each day... Out of close to 250 members I notice only about 50 -70 people even open the e-mails, let alone read them. Do you think I should make the Chizuk e-mails shorter each day? VOTE ABOVE. Thank you!

I posted that they are just right. I have noted that at times they have been shorter, but I think what counts is the quality of the content. Whatever length it takes to communicate the chizuk and the information we need to carry on this war is the right length.

I read every single one of the chizuk emails, they are full of tochen and just the perfect length. I even sometimes go back to old chizuk emails in my inbox and online.

Rabeinu Guard, I think they're perfect! If there are people that aren't reading them, then I think the only thing we can do, is to daven for those people.

For the ones who think it is too long you can divide it, with the first part in larger text, followed by smaller print for the thirstier.

That might be a good approach, MDM. I wonder if the most of the people who find the emails too long are spending much time on the forum. If not, then the results of the poll might be tilted.

Good point Ben.

And interesting thought, MDM.

Thanks!
