

Recommended listening list

I thought, for the benefit of the oylam, I'd make a list of songs that have kept me going, and given me chizuk. Some of them are poshut why they're on the list, while some are slightly more 'wacky', but all of them are incredible songs that have made a difference to me. Some of these songs are good for chizuk, while some are incredible to help us realise everything that Hashem does for us. Music can be a powerful tool in this struggle, and here are just a few songs that helped me. The list is far from complete- feel free to add! (In fact, please add so I don't feel like) Here it is, arranged by artist, with the album in brackets:

Avraham Fried

I wanted to comment on this topic because I am a crazy music fan, when my friends need to know a song who sang it etc. they ask me. They sometimes laugh at me that I am an iPod on feet (believe me my iPod is filled to capacity and the overflow is on my computer) but the music I would suggest might be a give away for any one who knows me and will read this forum. It is non-Jewish (kosher) music of a few certain selected composers.

Let me guess,

Eminem, Mozart, Elvis, and Raffi?

and even if you like Goyish music, a Weirdo like me can Jewafy it for you...

Ie. Der Bakgasse Bucherim, (my favorite) Brucha Shapiro (?) Michael Yankelzon, Ha Avanim Hagilgulim, Elya Preslowitz (who may or may not have been a shabbos goy, and who may or may not have been jewish)

It is integral when Jewafying a song to add intermittent oy oy oys, and try to play it whith a bit more minor chords, preferably diminished...

Here is a link to an MP3 of the dancing music from the siyum hashas. It always lifts me up when I listen to it.

This morning I felt the yetzer starting to make trouble. I listened to Shlomo Simcha's rendition of Carlbach's Mizmor L'dovid and that worked quite well for me.

I'm curious whats the view of listening to non-jewish music for chizuk?

There are many goyish songs that pick me up tremendously especially in this struggle.
