

Tryin'

Shalom

I am in my 40s married with children

Recently, I decided to get help on a serious level with my addiction .

My mind wanders and the tayva builds.

It would be easy to blame this on the lack of excitement in marriage intimacy, but I had done this at times before marriage, and at times, when marriage bedroom was good, I'd still fall. Perhaps it still is the reason, but marriage stuff is probably not gettin' better anytime soon.

I have more to write, but as this is my first post, id like to hear some suggestions first please.

Thank you so much

In preparation for my group and the call tomorrow, I quote the followin': it is not how I feel right now, but I have felt this way in the past:

If you must know, I've been feeling a little bit down of late. It's the process of maintaining my sobriety. It's repetitive, it's relentless, and above all, it's tedious. When I left rehab, I accepted your (my sponsor) influence. I committed to my recovery. And now, two years in, I find myself asking, 'Is this it?' My sobriety is simply a grind. It's just this leaky faucet which requires constant maintenance, and in return offers only not to drip. It's odd. I, uh, I used to imagine that a relapse would be the climax to some grand drama. And now, I think that, if I were to act out again, it would in fact be an anti-climax. It would be a surrender to the incessant drip, drip, drip of existence.

Sadly, it appears like I will need to cancel the afternoon call for the time being. I am available by email. Be strong and hatzlachah.

I also don't know why this is posting funny.

Even in white knucklin' mode, one can make the correct sobriety decisions.
