Out of the 100 word quota, 9494 has like 94 left to complete his quota, and you've got 85

Also - I don't know if anyone informed you but it's not Motze Shabbos now. Hey where do you live???

But he was 13 over in this post reasons not to act out in 20 words or less: 9494 wrote:

When we act out, especially at night we are likely to spend the rest of the night doing it. Two hours of sleep sucks for everyone and functioning the next day is deathly.
So he is only left with 80.

Perhaps in the land down unda' it is Motzei Shabbos already, or perhaps it is still M"S from last week.

Is thenewme613 counted as one word? How about KOT?

I think you'd better stick around - we're definitely gonna need a moderator on this post

Mabey I didn't get the joke but I don't think it's appropriate to make jokes about tzadikim. Just my two cents .. . Nothing personal

Nope. Vort Joke Vort Joke post post don't stop till Motze Shabbos is done.

Each post must be less than or equal to 100 words, and we're not counting (Cordnoy may...). Keep them coming.

Hey changing I was only explaining the word haveadollar. I wasn't making light of any chassidishe customs.

If not, I'm heading to the bar myself to find out.

It says in lech lecha that Avrohom told Sorah that "now he knows that she is beautiful." Rashi brings the midrash that becuz of the tznius between them he never even saw her until he accidently saw her reflection in the water. In all the years they were married, Avrohom never even saw Sorah. If he didnt see her then he certainly didnt stam shmooze with her or go out on "married dates" with her.

This is the ideal that the Torah wants. Avrohom and Sorah are the model for a yiddishe marriage. Just like Avrohom never looked at Sorah and certinly never socialized with her, so too we should strive to reach this goal with our own wives. Halevai if any man could say that he didnt know his wife was pretty becuz he never looked at her.

Ok Guys go ahead give it to him
