

A VIABLE STRATEGY?

Posted by Dexterboy - 11 May 2016 04:51

---

An addictive personality is an addictive personality I know. I am not recommending this for people who know they have this. Simply putting it out there. I am NOT an alcoholic, but I do enjoy drinking on occasion. Shobbos etc... Ive noticed ONCE IN A WHILE when I'm RED HOT about to fall, if I drink some alcohol the HEAT and DESIRE dissipates a bit. The euphoria of liquor can replace the desire of sin ON CERTAIN OCCASIONS. And RESPONSIBLY. Has anyone ever experienced this as well? And do you think , if done in moderation and responsibly (and are a NON ADDICTIVE PERSONALITY) is halachically OK and actually GOOD. Using something physical.. wine/liquor, like on yom tov/shobbos, and elevating it as a tool to do a mitzvah or OVERCOME a sin.

=====

=====

Re: A VIABLE STRATEGY?

Posted by markz - 11 May 2016 04:59

---

Brother if this helps you great

You may have a problem keeping tally of your 90 day count with such a strategy

Unless, perhaps you passed 90 days with this plan? Pls let me know

=====

=====

Re: A VIABLE STRATEGY?

Posted by stillgoing - 11 May 2016 22:21

---

I think you sure made sure we were sure that you sure don't mean to go overboard. But couldn't you have posted this in adar. I suppose it could work, although i don't have any experience in AA, perhalps it can be a slippery slope.

=====

====

Re: A VIABLE STRATEGY?

Posted by mirror - 12 May 2016 00:51

---

It reminds me, that i once heard that a certain rebba once told his chasiddim that if they ever felt the urge to sin, they should eat instead. Sort of move the animilistic craving into a more permitted area. By the look of things, they took his advice very seriously.

=====

====

Re: A VIABLE STRATEGY?

Posted by dms1234 - 12 May 2016 03:11

---

Warning: Spoiler!

WAHOOOO!!!! Hey my as well become alcoholics too! TZ pass the woodford!

=====

=====

Re: A VIABLE STRATEGY?

Posted by Gevura Shebyesod - 13 May 2016 03:19

---

=====

=====