

"breaking" free

Posted by Joegarder - 04 Jul 2016 03:43

---

last thursday i snapped my tablet in half. i peeled back the millimeter thin glass to look at the deep world of stupidty something so small can bring but it really was just a piece of glass. i smashed most of it to dust and burned anything that could be burned. of course that night i watched porn on my ipod. and last night to. and today. so today i did the same thing to my ipod. totally obliterated. i justified having the ipod for so long but really it only was porn free since i had my tablet the minute that was gone back to the ipod. im very involved in music, and will miss being able to download any song right away. this is my first post, really looking for support

=====

Re: "breaking" free

Posted by mike dupont - 05 Aug 2016 11:00

---

If you're talking about people who aren't addicted then it's an aveiro like any other (kind of). Every living person has his/her own YH and needs to fight it when it comes to it.

Addicts on the other hand have to learn how to live on a daily basis, no matter what.

=====

Re: "breaking" free

Posted by Fb2016fbt - 05 Aug 2016 21:31

---

I completely agree with you, however, it's not black and white. There is a gray area between being an addict to lust and having the nisayon equal to a nisayon to eat treif. What I mean is that this is a nisayon that one may not be addicted to, however they still struggle with it a lot more than a standard aveirah. So that person would have to confront it on his level with the tools that work for him In a personal way

=====