

Chazon Yeshayahu

Posted by Yeshayahu 41:6 - 31 May 2023 04:29

---

Hi friends!

I havent posted anything substantial in a while. My low self-esteem is getting the better of me and convincing me that I don't matter and nothing I have to say makes a difference to anyone anyway. So let's see if I can break out of it here by posting from time to time on this new thread. I guess it's similar to "Grant's rants" (he didn't copyright that concept, did he?)

Looking forward to hearing from myself!!

=====

Re: Chazon Yeshayahu

Posted by Yeshayahu 41:6 - 06 Jun 2023 19:10

---

cordnoy wrote on 06 Jun 2023 17:56:

My suggestion? Work on the problem.

Is that a contradiction to making it easier for myself by getting rid of this and looking for another way to make hashtadlus for parnassa?

=====

Re: Chazon Yeshayahu

Posted by Markz - 06 Jun 2023 19:31

---

Yeshayahu 41:6 wrote on 06 Jun 2023 17:48:

I really appreciate the oilum's input. It would be so much better to just rent an office, but it's not the kind of job that I'm working hour X to hour Y and then I'm done. It's the kind of job that has to be at home because I could be needed for something unexpectedly and most of the work has to be done at night

Bradley you don't want to sound like a phony Chazon Yeshayahu if your revelations are limited to midnight hours when you're not lucid, gd forbid like bilaam's donkey.

Apparently you have a not for prophet business. It's time to upgrade!

Kidding aside - it's (possibly) your choice if you want to be available for work at night or not...

=====

Re: Chazon Yeshayahu
Posted by DavidT - 06 Jun 2023 20:07

---

Yeshayahu 41:6 wrote on 06 Jun 2023 19:10:

cordnoy wrote on 06 Jun 2023 17:56:

My suggestion? Work on the problem.

Is that a contradiction to making it easier for myself by getting rid of this and looking for another way to make hashtadlus for parnassa?

In my humble opinion not only is it not a contradiction but it's a must. The temptations are more powerful than us, and if we try to fight it head on we will almost always lose. Once we are standing at the edge of the cliff, we are very vulnerable to falling off of it. Instead, we must stay as far away from the edge of the cliff as possible. Therefore, one of the most powerful tools in this struggle is making good fences.

The secret to success in this area is learning where we are vulnerable and preparing fences in advance. We all need to learn our Yetzer Hara well, as it says in Mishlei (12:10): "Yode'ah Tzadik nefesh be'hemto -The Tzadik knows the nature of his animal."

=====

====

Re: Chazon Yeshayahu

Posted by Yeshayahu 41:6 - 17 Aug 2023 20:10

---

Hi, i guess I'm back. There were several times this week i came close to falling and I saved myself by reaching out on the chat so i guess its good to stick around here. I just wanted to share a thought that helped me a little.

Imagine living in Yerushalayim during the churban. Or beitar as the Romans were overcoming bar kochba. Or in a city in Germany in the 11th century as the Crusaders come into town. Or having just resettled in France before being expelled again. Or in England being besieged in a castle about to decide whether or not to kill yourself before the castle walls are breached by bloodthirsty Christian mobs. Or being expelled from Spain after years of relative peace. Or watching in horror as the black Inquisitor's carriage pulls to a stop outside your house. Or hearing the thunderous hoofbeats of Cossack warhorses across the Ukrainian countryside. Or walking the streets of Berlin in the late 1930's. Or trying to perform a bris in Communist Russia. Or waking up to the dogs barking in Auschwitz.

Any one of those Jews probably thought "How terrible it is to live in this generation! why couldnt i have been born in a more peaceful time?"

I daresay, if any one of them were taken out of that time period and placed in our world, they would BEG to go back to where they came from. THIS IS OUR HOLOCAUST, OUR POGROM, OUR INQUISITION, OUR TACH V'TAT etc! So i think to myself "Im going through my Holocaust now. Do i want to come out as one of those who held on to their emunah? Or to be one of those who lost it, granted through no fault of their own, and be spoken about like 'listen you cant blame him, with the gehenim he went through...'"

I believe that those of us who hold strong today are, on some level, comparable to the ones who went through the gehenim of their particular galus, held on, and passed it to the next generation for them to hold strong in THEIR gehenim. And when all this is over, we'll all be on the same side meeting and greeting all those who, like us, went through their generations challenges and succeeded.

=====

====

Re: Chazon Yeshayahu

Posted by richtig - 18 Aug 2023 17:04

---

Yeshayahu 41:6 wrote on 17 Aug 2023 20:10:

Hi, i guess I'm back. There were several times this week i came close to falling and I saved myself by reaching out on the chat so i guess its good to stick around here. I just wanted to share a thought that helped me a little.

Imagine living in Yerushalayim during the churban. Or beitar as the Romans were overcoming bar kochba. Or in a city in Germany in the 11th century as the Crusaders come into town. Or having just resettled in France before being expelled again. Or in England being besieged in a castle about to decide whether or not to kill yourself before the castle walls are breached by bloodthirsty Christian mobs. Or being expelled from Spain after years of relative peace. Or watching in horror as the black Inquisitor's carriage pulls to a stop outside your house. Or hearing the thunderous hoofbeats of Cossack warhorses across the Ukrainian countryside. Or walking the streets of Berlin in the late 1930's. Or trying to perform a bris in Communist Russia. Or waking up to the dogs barking in Auschwitz.

Any one of those Jews probably thought "How terrible it is to live in this generation! why couldnt i have been born in a more peaceful time?"

I daresay, if any one of them were taken out of that time period and placed in our world, they would BEG to go back to where they came from. THIS IS OUR HOLOCAUST, OUR POGROM, OUR INQUISITION, OUR TACH V'TAT etc! So i think to myself "Im going through my Holocaust now. Do i want to come out as one of those who held on to their emunah? Or to be one of those who lost it, granted through no fault of their own, and be spoken about like 'listen you cant blame him, with the gehenim he went through...'"

I believe that those of us who hold strong today are, on some level, comparable to the ones who went through the gehenim of their particular galus, held on, and passed it to the next generation for them to hold strong in THEIR gehenim. And when all this is over, we'll all be on the same side meeting and greeting all those who, like us, went through their generations challenges and succeeded.

Reb Yeshaya, I think the chizzuk is great when personal. I think the comparison to bloodshed and unimaginable yissurim is unconscionable

=====
=====

Re: Chazon Yeshayahu

Posted by Yeshayahu 41:6 - 18 Aug 2023 22:54

---

Just sharing the thought that works for me. Take it or leave it.

Hashem put us here because we couldnt handle that, and Hashem put THEM there because they couldnt handle THIS.

Our generation is often referred to as the "spiritual Holocaust". do you find that equally reprehensible? Some people do, and I totally respect that.

I'm just making the point that I want to come out of our test victorious just like those heros did then.

=====

Re: Chazon Yeshayahu
Posted by richtig - 20 Aug 2023 02:32

---

Yeshayahu 41:6 wrote on 18 Aug 2023 22:54:

Just sharing the thought that works for me. Take it or leave it.

Hashem put us here because we couldnt handle that, and Hashem put THEM there because they couldnt handle THIS.

Our generation is often referred to as the "spiritual Holocaust". do you find that equally reprehensible? Some people do, and I totally respect that.

I'm just making the point that I want to come out of our test victorious just like those heros did then. We are in this together.

=====

Re: Chazon Yeshayahu
Posted by bright - 21 Aug 2023 00:27

---

richtig wrote on 18 Aug 2023 17:04:

Yeshayahu 41:6 wrote on 17 Aug 2023 20:10:

Hi, i guess I'm back. There were several times this week i came close to falling and I saved myself by reaching out on the chat so i guess its good to stick around here. I just wanted to share a thought that helped me a little.

Imagine living in Yerushalayim during the churban. Or beitar as the Romans were overcoming bar kochba. Or in a city in Germany in the 11th century as the Crusaders come into town. Or having just resettled in France before being expelled again. Or in England being besieged in a castle about to decide whether or not to kill yourself before the castle walls are breached by bloodthirsty Christian mobs. Or being expelled from Spain after years of relative peace. Or watching in horror as the black Inquisitor's carriage pulls to a stop outside your house. Or hearing the thunderous hoofbeats of Cossack warhorses across the Ukrainian countryside. Or walking the streets of Berlin in the late 1930's. Or trying to perform a bris in Communist Russia. Or waking up to the dogs barking in Auschwitz.

Any one of those Jews probably thought "How terrible it is to live in this generation! why couldn't I have been born in a more peaceful time?"

I daresay, if any one of them were taken out of that time period and placed in our world, they would BEG to go back to where they came from. THIS IS OUR HOLOCAUST, OUR POGROM, OUR INQUISITION, OUR TACH V'TAT etc! So I think to myself "I'm going through my Holocaust now. Do I want to come out as one of those who held on to their emunah? Or to be one of those who lost it, granted through no fault of their own, and be spoken about like 'listen you can't blame him, with the gehehim he went through...'"

I believe that those of us who hold strong today are, on some level, comparable to the ones who went through the gehehim of their particular galus, held on, and passed it to the next generation for them to hold strong in THEIR gehehim. And when all this is over, we'll all be on the same side meeting and greeting all those who, like us, went through their generations challenges and succeeded.

Reb Yeshaya, I think the chizzuk is great when personal. I think the comparison to bloodshed and unimaginable yissurim is unconscionable

Personally, when I was going through my emotional yissurim I would ask daily, that Hashem would replace them with the most horrible physical pain possible just as long as it paid whatever pain quota I had to not have to deal with the internal pain. I was also told by many great people that it was my holocaust or concentration camp. I know it is not necessarily proof but you get my drift. It is well known that the Chofetz Chaim said the last galus will be a spiritual one, and when he heard sighs of relief he said it must have already started. He seemed to think it is worse.... Additionally no two people go through pain the same way and definitely not any two generations. What for one is unimaginable to the other may be a walk in the park. Subjectively the pain may be felt the same.

=====

Re: Chazon Yeshayahu
Posted by Yeshayahu 41:6 - 21 Aug 2023 00:38

---

What Yeshayahu failed to convey was brought out by R' bright perfectly

=====

=====

Re: Chazon Yeshayahu

Posted by Yeshayahu 41:6 - 10 Oct 2023 16:12

---

A gezuntin vinter to all and yeshuos and nechamos for klal yisrael in this difficult time.

I just wanted to share an incredible thing that happened to me Friday night. Unfortunately, I had acted out and then fell asleep. A few hours later (around the time that our blessed peace-loving cousins began their freedom fight to drive out the occupiers from their land) I woke up with my arm (that had the major role in the acting out) in excruciating pain and completely dislocated from my shoulder. I couldn't move it an inch without crying out in pain. My wife (who of course knows nothing about this) was still up and I asked her to go wake up the hatzala guy across the street. She was about to do so when I whispered through clenched teeth "Ok, Hashem, I know exactly why this is happening. I am mekabel bln, absolutely no acting out from now until chanuka". I know this sounds like a fairy tale but, I kid you not, right after I said those words my arm slid right back into place and I was able to move it freely without pain.

Now should I be like Yeravam ben Nevat who continued sinning after regaining the use of his arm or should I actually keep my word?

What does the oilum make of this story? Is there a G-d after all? Does He actually care about us?

I eagerly await your thoughts...

=====

=====

Re: Chazon Yeshayahu

Posted by Hashem Help Me - 10 Oct 2023 16:15

---

A loving "potch" from our Father.

=====

=====

Re: Chazon Yeshayahu

Posted by foolie - 10 Oct 2023 16:25

---

Is there a G-d in this world absolutely, you need only open your eyes and see that time you needed some money and somehow through a third party you ended up with that exact amount in the nick of time, and countless other small episodes when things looked bleak but then a third party had the answer and made the bleakness go away that is all the hand of G-d touching you showing you he cares, should you keep your word absolutely to the best of your ability this story should show you that G-d is here G-d cares and G-d listens to you and sometimes even gives you an immediate answer

=====

Re: Chazon Yeshayahu

Posted by connected - 10 Oct 2023 19:12

---

Yeshayahu 41:6 wrote on 10 Oct 2023 16:12:

What does the oilum make of this story? Is there a G-d after all? Does He actually care about us?

He let you finish and only then did he twist your arm

I'd say he's there and caring.

=====

Re: Chazon Yeshayahu

Posted by bright - 10 Oct 2023 21:28

---

A gezuntin vinter to all and yeshuos and nechamos for klal yisrael in this difficult time.

I just wanted to share an incredible thing that happened to me Friday night. Unfortunately, I had acted out and then fell asleep. A few hours later (around the time that our blessed peace-loving cousins began their freedom fight to drive out the occupiers from their land) I woke up with my arm (that had the major role in the acting out) in excruciating pain and completely dislocated from my shoulder. I couldn't move it an inch without crying out in pain. My wife (who of course knows nothing about this) was still up and I asked her to go wake up the hatzala guy across the street. She was about to do so when I whispered through clenched teeth "Ok, Hashem, I know exactly why this is happening. I am mekabel bln, absolutely no acting out from now until chanuka". I know this sounds like a fairy tale but, I kid you not, right after I said those words my arm slid right back into place and I was able to move it freely without pain.

Now should I be like Yeravam ben Nevat who continued sinning after regaining the use of his arm or should I actually keep my word?

What does the oilum make of this story? Is there a G-d after all? Does He actually care about us?

I eagerly await your thoughts...There is a piece from the nesivos shalom referring to these messages as a modern day bas kol. Hashem our loving father talking to us.

=====

=====