

Feeling shayachus

Posted by Yitz18 - 27 Jul 2023 21:22

I have not been able to get any major streaks going in a long time. I think part of the problem is I r"l feel a shayachus to the world of pornography. It's weird because: you wouldn't be able to tell my looking at me or speaking to me. I'm very makpid not be shayach to the secular world- haven't watched tv (willingly) or movies since 12th grade, and haven't listened to non Jewish music since then either. I try and make my ikker pleasure come from Torah and dibbuk chaveirim, in a healthy nice way. So why is the one thing I feel shayach to, connected to, pornography? Can anyone else relate?

This is a courageous question. I assume that you feel drawn to it beyond the mere rush of tayva and lusting.

It may be wise to examine what was your initial exposure to porn. What has been your relationship with it, and what does it "do" for you.

Thinking about these things, along with why you really want to stop, can open doors...

Would probably be helpful to talk to one of the special mentors here who have a lot of experience helping special guys like you.

It's amazing to see such courage to come out and speak up. It's hard to say what you've said, that you avoided and were makpid against any small hashpa'ah from such goyish kite to the biggest.

It eventually penetrated seemingly through what you're saying once you opened the hatch to see it, you "can't get enough" and "feel" as though you are labeled as a shayachus to such trifeus.

I hear where you are coming from but as chaimogen said best to speak with the top ppl on here that know exactly.. but from my experience I felt the same to such strong feelings when I had the ability to watch and although I had my boundaries here and there, I had ways out. And just like that went back in.. over and over and over. To the point where I couldn't see myself getting out of it and had just lost control Bec. Streaks always got broken.

so then overtime I built courage and spoke to some ppl here and guided myself to the exact point like you're doing of what and how come these feeling I feel and do due to such tayvos, where it comes from and where it would lead to. I had no solution but I tried all sorts of ideas and eventually b"h my streaks got stronger and I continued to work on myself and as long as my consistency strength to want to grow no matter the failures that arose here and there, scratch that, every time I just peaked (almost once to five times a week) and failed and then I somehow grew past it with a lot of trial and error, most of the time bec. I myself was weak enough to truly go full force with the guidance I got. Once I discussed it only got better, one talk wasn't enough for me and not two but eventually I'm happy of where I am now today.

So the answer to your question I think is to each there own. It is best to understand truly where it is rooted from just by getting a better understanding of yourself and what lead you to that, what makes you get triggered, are you in a faze of life that awakens the tayvos beyond (random questions.. but there can be many to think out for yourself)

I don't have the solution but if you speak it out with some detail like you are doing now you can forsure get full on success with hashem a help!

Thanks for the responses! I was thinking more about this over Shabbos. I'll start with a Mashal. I used to play in a relatively intense hockey league- we played like 3-4 times a week and it was great. The league stopped because of corona and then I went to yehsiva in Eretz Yisroel and obviously was not able to play. BH I play here and there on bein hazmanim with other bochurim when I'm back home. So, in total I play maybe 5-8 times a year. To be honest, if I didn't play those 5 times I would be fine. But if you came to me and said give up playing hockey for the rest of your life I wouldn't be able to handle it- not bc of the not playing but bc of the fear of committing myself to a life changing commitment. I was thinking perhaps that's what is preventing me from quitting P&M. Not that lack of the maaseh, the fear of commitment perhaps. Can anyone relate or comment on this. Gut voch thank you!!

I can definitely relate to this! This was and is a big struggle for me. There is an F2F about this the basic idea is what Shmuel said... I can say that you can tell yourself that when you do the work the feeling you are feeling now will not be so strong. Part of the reason is because part of you still thinks you could do it. For example during Covid, you probably did not have as intense longing for the hockey because it was not nogaya. Once your mind gets used to that, it gets easier. We are much stronger than we think we are. You can do it!

One of the big things is time.

Once your far enough along you never even want to back .

That doesnt mean there wont be falls, But you'll love the new you

Incredibly important point. experiencing the positivity of a life free of this stuff is a game changer.

If you love the life of a non-smoker, that grants you a much better motivation to quit than just being scared about lung cancer....

Offense, not defence.

This has actually been very beneficial for me to say how I feel and read the responses. Unfortunately, today I fell to p&m in a pretty embarrassing way. I was doing great and then I had a farher for a certain yeshiva which did not go nearly as well as I had hoped. I was feeling down after and fell. It's weird- I don't usually fall bc I am sad, usually it occurs from boredom. It was a really bad mistake today, I feel so stupid. IYH I will continue to uproot the connection I feel to p-even if it is not expressing itself by my actions today, my mindset is better and that is a step.

That is definitely a step! I found with myself that trying to cultivate a desire for a life without Porn, which was something that I didnt know or remember was not a good motivation until I got some serious clean days under my belt... Even if it is a source of motivation, bshaas maase when you are fighting a powerful urge it may not be enough. Your YH will show you what you think is all your hearts desire against a life you dont know or remember... I would suggest a more tangible benefit such as the affects on your marriage, kids, spirituality etc. but thats just my opinion.
