

Splat.

Posted by neshomo kedosha - 01 Nov 2024 10:58

Fell last night for the first time since RH/YK.

Now I had to get up and do the whole rosh chodesh davening. Can't be bothered anymore. What for. Meheicha teisa Hashem wants to hear my tefilos. What is the point of starting zman, my learning is not for Hashem. It's just meant to make me feel better about myself. It's just messed up.

And before you all tell me that I'm great for holding out throughout the month. It's not because I was trying to do the right thing. Poshut, I know that if I can't even control myself after Yom kippur than I am totally screwed. Not that it makes a major difference, at the end of the day look where I am now.

Life sucks

=====

Re: Splat.

Posted by chosemyshem - 01 Nov 2024 17:18

BenHashemBH wrote on 01 Nov 2024 17:16:

Yes.

Pardon my assumption, but you aren't Rashi nor Rav Chaim Kanievsky. If the comparison motivates you, then that is wonderful. If you are just saying "well, I'm not and may never be like that" then that's 100% true. You aren't them. You aren't even future you yet. By your thought process basically everyone would give up because we're all 'not' something. We're all working towards it. A ben aliya is someone going up. Whether you are here or there is a separate cheshbon from what direction you are going in.

I'm my personal opinion, take it or leave it, you are setting unrealistic and unfair standards for yourself that will only lead to despair. If you are working on it, then you are a ben aliya. Fall or not, if you pick yourself up and keep going, you are still a mountain climber.

Being nichshol isn't what comes between you becoming a Gadol. Becoming a Gadol is what's coming between you and wanting to stop being nichshol.

AMEN! Somebody please put this on a t-shirt.

=====

Re: Splat.

Posted by chaimoigen - 03 Nov 2024 00:05

Markz wrote on 01 Nov 2024 13:47:

neshomo kedosha wrote on 01 Nov 2024 10:58:

Life sucks

This is a very common reaction for a lot of brothers here on GYE

I fell, therefore Life Sucks

IMHO it's VERY often backwards. You're beating about the wrong bush!

Say with me

"Life Sucks, THAT's why I fell"

Now, who cares which way you say it??

Well, if it's your way, then Porn is the problem.

If it's my way, Porn is the solution.

Focus on your problems and your solutions will change. It's a different journey than Chopstix and 90 day races.

I wish you well bro.

Go ahead fight with it

We are here for you

Hey, brother, here's a warm hand. I want to add my voice to the chorus of Chizzuk.

But, in addition to agreeing with what Ben and Shem have written, I think that this post from Rabbeinu Markz is GOLD , and it contains a very powerful message that's worthwhile thinking about.

Have you thought about what caused you to fall? What lead up to it?

So many times, we struggle with various forms of pain in life. A lot of us here unfortunately learned to use various forms of negative stuff as a solution to the problems in life... understanding how tgat has worked for you can be extremely helpful.

Not only because you can better plan to help deal with lifes painful stuff in a better way. But also because, understanding this about yourself can help you see yourself with Rachmanus and caring, instead of self- loathing.

Here's a warm hug. GYE means hope. You can and will learn how to live real, and fly free. Your Neshoma Kedosha , and you deserve it.

Chaim Oigen

=====
=====

Re: Splat.

Posted by neshomo kedosha - 03 Nov 2024 08:40

BenHashemBH wrote on 01 Nov 2024 17:16:

Being nichshol isn't what comes between you becoming a Gadol. Becoming a Gadol is what's coming between you and wanting to stop being nichshol.

Trust me I'm a long way off from being a godol.

Our kollel system places a goal to produce people who are serious talmidei chachomim who will keep torah going and continue it to the next dor. A part of Klal yisroel's continuation is due to yidden who excelled in their limud hatorah. Otherwise the Torah would be forgotten

In our wonderful dor, we have something which I don't think ever existed. True, yidden through the generations always struggled with actual aveiros and that was always their avodas Hashem wherever they were at. No one ever said they were tzadikim. (The Tanya writes that a beinoni is someone who struggles with his yetzer horo but doesn't fall.) Today the system pushes for yungerleit as 'bnei torah' who are sitting and learning 'al taharas hakodesh'. Like someone mentioned in the last few days they're told that 'Klal yisroel needs you'. That leads to the frustration I wrote about, where you are learning a full day in kollel supposedly living the holy life, but at the same time struggling with aveiros in the other direction. It creates a major identity crisis

=====

Re: Splat.

Posted by BenHashemBH - 03 Nov 2024 11:21

Shalom Brother,

You are a good person.

If we can forget about Klal Yisroel for a moment - You need you.

Whatever aveiros people need to work on, they can still be holy. Working on it makes them even more holy. Your aveiros are not your identity. Try to separate that from your self image. Your challenges are designed by Hashem to facilitate your ultimate growth. Every guf starts as a stira to the neshama.

You ARE sitting and learning al taharas haKodesh. Feeling good about that learning and about yourself will give you the strength to stop. Feeling bad about it and invalidating yourself because of it only serves to sap your motivation.

The contradiction you feel is normal. That's what life is. A divine struggle.

You are a pure, holy Neshomo Kedosha.

=====
=====

Re: Splat.

Posted by iwantlife - 03 Nov 2024 15:22

neshomo kedosha wrote on 03 Nov 2024 08:40:

Today the system pushes for yungerleit as 'bnei torah' who are sitting and learning 'al taharas hakodesh'. Like someone mentioned in the last few days they're told that 'Klal yisroel needs you'. That leads to the frustration I wrote about, where you are learning a full day in kollel supposedly living the holy life, but at the same time struggling with aveiros in the other direction. It creates a major identity crisis

I want to add one more point to the responses here. While we don't know Hashem's cheshbonos, it's clear that this generation, ???? ??? ????, is experiencing a nisayon like no other. I would say, as many wiser people have pointed out, that there's a strong aspect of ???? running through this challenge. I was exposed to porn at age 10, well before I had the tools or ????? to handle it. Thousands of hidden are suffering, thinking they are without tools or hope to break free. As you've noted, there are also more yungerleit than ever. Now we can debate about the systematic nature of this kollel affair, with its many pros and some cons. It occurs to me though, imagine how powerful ??? ????? who have been through this struggle, and came out the other side victorious, will be! What a boon for ??? ?????! And you don't have to imagine, because here on GYE, there are so many choshuve ??? ????? who have risen to the challenge, and are saving yidden daily! All this is to say, perhaps instead of viewing yourself as a hopeless ?????, view yourself as a future ????? ?????, one who can save the next ???. One thing is for sure, you don't have this ????? by accident! I have no doubt that that you can overcome it, and use your ????? ??, which is bursting through the pain in your posts, to turn all your falls to ??????! Klal yisroel needs you!!!

Humbly,

iwantlife

=====

Re: Splat.

Posted by vehkam - 03 Nov 2024 18:20

neshomo kedosha wrote on 03 Nov 2024 08:40:

BenHashemBH wrote on 01 Nov 2024 17:16:

Being nichshol isn't what comes between you becoming a Gadol. Becoming a Gadol is what's coming between you and wanting to stop being nichshol.

Trust me I'm a long way off from being a godol.

Our kollel system places a goal to produce people who are serious talmidei chachomim who will keep torah going and continue it to the next dor. A part of Klal yisroel's continuation is due to yidden who excelled in their limud hatorah. Otherwise the Torah would be forgotten

In our wonderful dor, we have something which I don't think ever existed. True, yidden through the generations always struggled with actual aveiros and that was always their avodas Hashem wherever they were at. No one ever said they were tzadikim. (The Tanya writes that a beinoni is someone who struggles with his yetzer horo but doesn't fall.) Today the system pushes for yungerleit as 'bnei torah' who are sitting and learning 'al taharas hakodesh'. Like someone mentioned in the last few days they're told that 'Klal yisroel needs you'. That leads to the frustration I wrote about, where you are learning a full day in kollel supposedly living the holy life, but at the same time struggling with aveiros in the other direction. It creates a major identity crisis

The nisyonos that you have are the the ones that hashem tailor made for you. Work through them and you will grow into the best version of yourself possible. Once you rid yourself of the distractions of lust etc you will be able to see yourself in a much clearer and positive light. Your identity crisis will disappear.

=====

Re: Splat.

Posted by upanddown - 03 Nov 2024 18:23

iwantlife wrote on 03 Nov 2024 15:22:

neshomo kedosha wrote on 03 Nov 2024 08:40:

Today the system pushes for yungerleit as 'bnei torah' who are sitting and learning 'al taharas hakodesh'. Like someone mentioned in the last few days they're told that 'Klal yisroel needs you'. That leads to the frustration I wrote about, where you are learning a full day in kollel supposedly living the holy life, but at the same time struggling with aveiros in the other direction. It creates a major identity crisis

I want to add one more point

All this is to say, perhaps instead of viewing yourself as a hopeless ?????, view yourself as a future ?????, one who can save the next ???.

.....

Humbly,

iwantlife

Sorry for butting in... love every word besides for that one line...

What if our dear friend neshomo kedosha is NOT on the level of becoming a future ???
???????

What if he will NOT be able to start a global organisation that will be ??? the next generation?

What if he will ONLY be able to become a great person for himself and ONLY help his own children + maybe a few of his future talmidim?

Is it still worth fighting this beast?

Everyone is obsessed with becoming a Gadol... I just don't get it... I don't blame you, we've been brain washed this way from a very young age.

You're right that the ??? of today will be on a higher level than in any previous generation to a certain extent, but that is regardless to whether he will or will not become an outstanding, influential personality.

Perhaps you can rephrase it like his: view yourself as a future ???, an ehrliche Yid, a ???, an ??? of ???". Someone who brings tremendous ??? to this generation through his ???.

Please forgive me for poking my nose in... I'm now quickly running back into my burrow to fix my own problems...

=====

=====

Re: Splat.

Posted by BenHashemBH - 03 Nov 2024 18:54

I think we were (or at least I was) using the term 'Gadol' loosely to mean what you are saying. Striving for your own greatness in fulfilled potential.

Bishvili Nivra Olam. From the King to the fool, we all need to believe and feel our own self worth.

Kol tov

=====

=====

Re: Splat.

Posted by iwantlife - 03 Nov 2024 19:22

You're always welcome to poke your nose in. I didn't mean to feed any obsession. Of course one must first focus on himself and his family as reasons for vanquishing this beast. My point simply is, if you are operating under the assumption that 'klal yisroel needs you', don't think that your struggle is a stirah. It may in fact be the cornerstone of your greatness. And when I say the next dor, I don't mean starting any new organizations. Every time you post, empathize, or even debate on this holy forum, you may very well be saving someone. I can say I personally been saved through the wonderful gedolim here on GYE, and I'm determined to pay it forward, to the best of my ability.

=====

=====

Re: Splat.

Posted by rebakiva - 03 Nov 2024 19:46

Dear neshama kedosha:

I want you to know that I felt exactly the same way untill 50 days ago.

I'm not a kollel yungerman struggling with this while needing to one day be there for the next generation.

I'M THERE ALREADY I'm bh a magid shiur that's there for my talmudim, in the last few years I wasn't only being there for them while also struggling, I WAS A WALKING STIRA, I was "helping" them with this struggle while knowing deep down what a 2 facer liar jerk I am.

But BH hashem brought me to this great community and needless to say 27 days later I was basically healed and now 50 days later I'm no longer that walking STIRA, I'm just a normal person who was placed by hashem into the role of magid shiur and no I'm not the up coming gadol hador I'm just there for whoever hashem wants me to be for, talmudim and now also my fellow brothers here on GYE.

My friend you are the same, your a great guy don't doubt yourself that can only have a negative effect on you like it had on me. Just appreciate the position hashem put you in, and use it to the best of your ability and bring out the greatness from deep within you.

With love rebakiva

=====

Re: Splat.

Posted by odyossefchai - 03 Nov 2024 20:48

If we are describing a 'gadol' as someone who has a long line of people outside their door asking for advice and brachos, yes, it's statistically unlikely you will reach that level. There are only a handful in each generation.

And anyways, is that a goal? I've never heard that being on people's sukkah walls is a goal for a Jew to have.

If we are discussing someone who HKBH gave them and extremely difficult challenge, one that may consume his life, a challenge that will be on your mind day and night, will require tremendous work in order to fix and attain holiness? Yes, that is something you absolutely CAN achieve.

We are told that every Jew can be like Moshe. The Rambam paskens that way. A Jewish child cannot be nursed by a non Jewish woman. Explaining the GRA, that this is because every Jew can be a pel el peh medaber im haschina like moshe. Does that mean every Jew will go on Har Sinai and get the Torah? Of course not. But every person has the potential to reach THEIR potential.

Now all this is hypothetical.

Because it happens to be that this nisayon does not have to consume us day and night.

While it may be hard to believe at first, it is a fact that this nisayon is much more of learning how to manage where it comes from and does not require us to white nuckle our way through life. Sometimes we think that we will have the challenge of Yossef Hatzadik 24/7. It doesn't have to be that way at all.

Because then you'll fall dozens of times. once you learn how to break free, the challenge becomes far more manageable.

Take it from me. A broken soul 65 days ago. A soaring a free soul now.

There is a way to real free. Stick around. Shmooze to the people here. You will be successful. You absolutely have it in you to succeed.

=====
=====

Re: Splat.

Posted by upanddown - 03 Nov 2024 21:04

iwantlife wrote on 03 Nov 2024 19:22:

You're always welcome to poke your nose in. I didn't mean to feed any obsession. Of course one must first focus on himself and his family as reasons for vanquishing this beast. My point simply is, if you are operating under the assumption that 'klal yisroel needs you', don't think that your struggle is a stirah. It may in fact be the cornerstone of your greatness. And when I say the next dor, I don't mean starting any new organizations. Every time you post, empathize, or even debate on this holy forum, you may very well be saving someone. I can say I personally been saved through the wonderful gedolim here on GYE, and I'm determined to pay it forward, to the best of my ability.

Thanks for clarifying.

It was just an allergic reaction i had to those words...

=====

Re: Splat.

Posted by Muttel - 03 Nov 2024 23:22

Just want to add my 2 cents here, though late to the party (again!).

Welcome! Your pain, evident in your posts, is so familiar to me and many others here.... As Reb Akiva and others mentioned, we all fell many times.... But many of us have made it out....

Looking forward to seeing big things from you!

Muttel

=====

Re: Splat.

Posted by thompson - 04 Nov 2024 16:12

neshomo kedosha wrote on 01 Nov 2024 10:58:

Fell last night for the first time since RH/YK.

Now I had to get up and do the whole rosh chodesh davening. Can't be bothered anymore. What for. Meheicha teisa Hashem wants to hear my tefilos. What is the point of starting zman, my learning is not for Hashem. It's just meant to make me feel better about myself. It's just messed up.

And before you all tell me that I'm great for holding out throughout the month. It's not because I was trying to do the right thing. Poshut, I know that if I can't even control myself after Yom kippur than I am totally screwed. Not that it makes a major difference, at the end of the day look where I am now.

Life sucks

I didn't read all the replies, so what I'm writing might be redundant, but in any case, it's important for me to remember as well.

There's a piece of Ramban that changed my perspective on Avodas Hashem. It's in Parshas Ki Seitzei on the Mitzvah of Shiluach haKan. I won't detail what he wrote there, but I urge you to look it up. In essence, there's nothing we can do for Hashem. Our Mitzvos don't make him feel good, and our Aveiros don't hurt him. It's all about us. Always. That's not a bug; it's by design. It's to make us the best version we can be.

???????? ?????????? ???? ????? ???????????

???????? ?????????? ?? ????????? ???

If you sin, what do you do to Him?

If your transgressions are many, how do you affect Him?

If you are righteous, what do you give Him;

What does He receive from your hand?

He's not sitting up there, waiting to hear your davening, and when you skip a day (because you masturbated?), he goes, "Dang it! Now my day is ruined!" Instead, what happens is that we miss an opportunity to improve.

But as our wise king said:

?? ????? ????? ?? ????? ????? ???

If you are wise, you are wise for yourself;

If you are a scoffer, you bear it alone.

=====