

reaching a road block

Posted by mosh1achnow - 10 Jan 2025 18:42

---

Im in an interesting situation currently, was wondering if anyone could relate or have any insight. In the past 10 years I have almost never been able to resist the temptation to look at p when i had access. B"H for my first time ever, I am two months clean (with one slip up in the middle) of p, and I have been strong in situations that i have fallen in the past. The issue I am having now, though, is that my struggle with m is still very prevalent. Right now it is a daily struggle. I am not married yet, but to the best of my knowledge, it is less problematic to enter the world of shidduchim while struggling with m than it is with p. Being that i feel less urgency regarding this issue, i am having a much harder time overcoming it.

Any advice is very appreciated

Warning: Spoiler!

=====
=====

Re: reaching a road block

Posted by BenHashemBH - 10 Jan 2025 19:34

---

mosh1achnow wrote on 10 Jan 2025 18:42:

Im in an interesting situation currently, was wondering if anyone could relate or have any insight.

In the past 10 years I have almost never been able to resist the temptation to look at p when i had access. B"H for my first time ever, I am two months clean (with one slip up in the middle) of p, and I have been strong in situations that i have fallen in the past. The issue I am having now, though, is that my struggle with m is still very prevalent. Right now it is a daily struggle. I am not married yet, but to the best of my knowledge, it is less problematic to enter the world of shidduchim while struggling with m than it is with p. Being that i feel less urgency regarding this issue, i am having a much harder time overcoming it.

Any advice is very appreciated

Warning: Spoiler!

Shalom Brother,

Yaasher Koach on you strides in not looking at p. That is incredible strength to resist even when you had access.

Without getting into a comparison of m vs p, behaviors of lust and self-pleasure would be a challenge in marriage that it would behoove you to work on now and not push it off.

Continues Hatzlacha and Kol Tov

=====
====

Re: reaching a road block

Posted by odyossefchai - 10 Jan 2025 19:42

---

BenHashemBH wrote on 10 Jan 2025 19:34:

mosh1achnow wrote on 10 Jan 2025 18:42:

Im in an interesting situation currently, was wondering if anyone could relate or have any insight. In the past 10 years I have almost never been able to resist the temptation to look at p when i had access. B"H for my first time ever, I am two months clean (with one slip up in the middle) of p, and I have been strong in situations that i have fallen in the past. The issue I am having now, though, is that my struggle with m is still very prevalent. Right now it is a daily struggle. I am not married yet, but to the best of my knowledge, it is less problematic to enter the world of shidduchim while struggling with m than it is with p. Being that i feel less urgency regarding this issue, i am having a much harder time overcoming it.

Any advice is very appreciated

Warning: Spoiler!

Shalom Brother,

Yaasher Koach on you strides in not looking at p. That is incredible strength to resist even when you had access.

Without getting into a comparison of m vs p, behaviors of lust and self-pleasure would be a challenge in marriage that it would behoove you to work on now and not push it off.

Continues Hatzlacha and Kol Tov

I can only concur with these wise words.

Getting rid of lust will help you in the future to have a true LOVE relationship and not a lust relationship.

=====
=====