Mrs. Rage - get off your husband's computer right now, and go to the Spouses of Addicts forum!
;D

I'd rather eat my own knee than get Mrs. Rage in on my mishigasim...

:D

The best thing about this tread is that it makes the split so much easier for the females to see

....and yes Kedusha; you have permission to fix that typo - I know you are itching to!!!!

do you guys for a moment think that on the other side of the iron curtain there is a thread called "do women with tall, hot and permanently tannend husbands have an easier time" or anything of the sort?

i'm just sayin....

I wonder what Mrs. Rage has to say about that subject...

nechos darga venasiv itsa.

The Rosh Yeshiva Rav Feldman, Shlita, in his Sefer on Shalom Bayis, translates this Gemara as follows: "Descend a step and marry a woman." The River, the Kettle, and the Bird p. 31.

Rashi on Yevamos 63a (5 lines up) explains the Gemara as follows: "Don't marry a woman who is more Chashuv than you, lest she not accept you."

The Rosh Yeshiva explains as follows: "It is interesting to note that not only do the Sages enjoin us to ignore faults in a wife, they even consider slight faults to be an asset in marriage. [At this point, the Rosh Yeshiva cites this Gemara]. Because a husband is relentlessly driven by his male ego, he will often be tempted to prove his superiority, a tendency which might easily trigger domestic strife. A wife with a fault lessens this temptation. Being married to a woman perceived to be less 'perfect' than oneself is, thus, ironically, not undesirable. Though his perception may be erroneous, at the very least, it feeds his ego needs." Ibid.
