

Am I the only crazy person in London?
Posted by London - 07 May 2009 01:41

---

I attend regular SA meetings in London and have not met any other Jewish people there. I have been to meetings and conventions in the States and Israel and met dozens of Jewish people in recovery. I can therefore assume that London is a really holy and special place full of Tzadikim who do not have issues with the internet or other S Addictions and I am the only crazy Jewish person living in London.

Let me know what you think.

=====
=====

Re: Am I the only crazy person in London?
Posted by the.guard - 07 May 2009 06:40

---

It could just be that "English" people are more "private" and less willing to take the brave and necessary step that you did, by joining SA.

=====
=====

Re: Am I the only crazy person in London?
Posted by Mevakesh Hashem - 07 May 2009 17:05

---

One of the sly tricks of the Yetzer Hara is to make you think you are alone in the world, suffering from something that you CAN'T get rid of.

Don't fall for his garbage. All he wants is to ruin you!

NO! You are not the only Tzduk struggling to get free of the Yetzer Hara in London!

Chazak V'Ematz!

=====
=====

Re: Am I the only crazy person in London?
Posted by DesertLion - 07 May 2009 20:52

---

Dear London,

I may not be Jewish, but I am also from London and I was greatly affected by these problems in the past as well.

I hope that makes you feel better- you are not alone!

TC

=====
=====