

A Messed Up Image of Hashem

Posted by trying123 - 04 Mar 2010 12:34

---

Hi Guys...

What kind of relationship do you have with Hashem?

I have such a hard time turning to Hashem for help... :-[

I want to be able to connect, but have very negative associations with anything involving Hashem... :'(

This is due to a very messed up message about Judiasim that I grew up with....

Does anyone else out there have this issue?

How can I undo this?

The reason I ask is because one of the fundamental concepts of the 12 steps is about turning to a higher power to pull us through....

I seem to be unable to do this.... ???

=====

Re: A Messed Up Image of Hashem

Posted by Dov - 11 Mar 2010 14:05

---

Dear T123,

I love the emoticons too, especially 8) and :o.

And as far as what you were getting at, it seems poshut that the poor guy who doesn't mourn after a loss that is normally shattering, but acts like he "feels OK" (perhaps in his mind mimicking the great tzaddikim), is likely in for trouble on the day when "his heart opens up" - that time you alluded to in post before. Instead of his heart opening up so that all the good stuff layed on it can fall in, in his case it often allows the bitterness, rage, and confusion to pour out. Or more likely explode out on everyone around him...

So, I love your approach of facing the pain, if you've got it. And it sounds to me (but who cares ) that you are on a good derech, all in all. "Tov" is fifteen steps away from "yafah" sometimes - like after sh'ma in emess v'yatziv!). Nu, it's slow and rough, but we should all be so lucky to have our heads screwed on as straight as you do. Amen!

Hatzlocha!

Don't give up, keep reaching out for help - oh, and you may find that you will get more of those gifts you desire by reaching out to help others than by mainly helping yourself cope. Just sharing your real pain with others may be a great way to help them, strange as it sounds.

Wer'e screwballs - we lead with our weaknesses!

Alei v'hatzlach!

=====

Re: A Messed Up Image of Hashem
what / think :
Posted by trying123 - 11 Mar 2010 15:14

---

dov wrote on 11 Mar 2010 14:05:

Just sharing your real pain with others may be a great way to help them, strange as it sounds.

Wer'e screwballs - we lead with our weaknesses!

That we are screwballs, I hear (or shall I talk for myself..?)

But you got me very curious...

I never heard the other part before...

I always thought that people are very uncomfortable with another persons pain.....

You think it helps people to hear someone elses real pain...?

How would that work...?

P.s. I treasure every word of honest feedback....

There where numerous posts and PM's to me that I printed out and read over a few times... To take it in.... Internalize it...

(Just a note for everyone: I found by myself when I started posting that I would just read through the reply of others and then just respond.... But then I realized that whatever you are hoping to gain from posting, you wont gain it if you don't fully digest the replies.....

My advice:

take the time and patience to slowly read through what people are telling you, and take it in. I gained from doing this...)

=====

Re: A Messed Up Image of Hashem
Posted by silentbattle - 11 Mar 2010 16:13

---

I agree completely...and by the way - reading through Dov's posts a few times is advisable for everyone! ;D

Perhaps what he meant was that from your perspective, you can understand other people, and offer comfort and advice in a unique way?

And by the way - reading your posts is inspiring, because we see someone who is struggling through many things in life, but refusing to give up, and continuing to work and grow!

=====

Re: A Messed Up Image of Hashem
Posted by Dov - 11 Mar 2010 18:24

---

But you got me very curious...

I never heard the other part before...

I always thought that people are very uncomfortable with another persons pain.....

You think it helps people to hear someone elses real pain...?

How would that work...?

Well, first of all, it only works for people who already have pain of their own, like other addicts, for example. And then, only when they are open to it, like, for example, if they are throwing up their tzoress all over you. Or if they admit they have tzoress but are not willing to go any further and actually open up about them. Or for folks that are so ashamed of themselves that they think they just need a rock to climb under.

These types generally feel quite relieved when they hear a real live mirror talking to them, and they see that their lives are not over - by a longshot. They often begin to undergo quite a life change as a result, and have only you to thank, for sharing your tzoress with them.

A bit nutty?

Maybe.

So?

One more thing, and this goes for Torah as much as for recovery: I believe that as long as I am sharing what I have actually experienced by using it in my life with others, they can benefit from it. On the other hand, "teaching" or "saying over" great and true stuff, bounces off their hearts and is relatively useless - except to cause more guilt. Their brains get lifted while their bodies are still in the garbage - and they know it. I have seen this.

More true ideas and inspiration is not what we really need. We seem to need more experience from action - more real, personal Truth. It's like talking about our relationship with Hashem vs. just saying your netilas yodayim or shehakol like you are plainly and simply talking to Someone.

It's in the action, not in the thinking about action. Gevalt.

So, all your struggles and pain will help someone someday, for certain.

Your deep hashkafic he'aros? - maybe they will, maybe they won't.

=====
=====

Re: A Messed Up Image of Hashem
Posted by trying123 - 11 Mar 2010 23:37

---

dov wrote on 11 Mar 2010 18:24:

One more thing, and this goes for Torah as much as for recovery: I believe that as long as I am sharing what I have actually experienced by using it in my life with others, they can benefit from it. On the other hand, "teaching" or "saying over" great and true stuff, bounces off their hearts and is relatively useless - except to cause more guilt. Their brains get lifted while their bodies are still in the garbage - and they know it. I have seen this.

More true ideas and inspiration is not what we really need. We seem to need more experience from action - more real, personal Truth. It's like talking about our relationship with Hashem vs. just saying your netilas yodayim or shehakol like you are plainly and simply talking to Someone.

It's in the action, not in the thinking about action. Gevalt.

So, all your struggles and pain will help someone someday, for certain.

Your deep hashkafic he'aros? - maybe they will, maybe they won't.

Do you think I posted a lot of lofty stuff that I haven't actually experienced....?

I'll think about that...

I wish I had a private "Dov-Translator", to fill me in on what Dov is really heading at, I am often unsure of what you mean to convey with your words....

To me it seems like you are trying to point out something non-positive that I should change....

To confess the truth, the Hashkafic haoros I wrote on this thread was about me....

about me expressing my dilemmas, my uncertainties, and stuff I am trying to figure out....

I have no idea if it will or will not help others...

I just know that I have a partially warped image of G-d, and I was trying to see what the non-warped image of G-d would look like....

I have a blockage to be able to simply say a She'hokol like I am talking to someone....

So I turn to the mind to try and figure out what this blockage is and how I can work around it...

I need to define in order to defeat....

Feel like I'm chasing my tale here...

=====
=====

Re: A Messed Up Image of Hashem
Posted by Dov - 12 Mar 2010 00:36

---

Dear Tried-123,

Your stuff is in black, and mine's in blue. Together, we are black-and-blue! Enjoy!

Tried-123 wrote on 11 Mar 2010 23:37:

dov wrote on 11 Mar 2010 18:24:

So, all your struggles and pain will help someone someday, for certain.

Your deep hashkafic he'aros? - maybe they will, maybe they won't.

Do you think I posted a lot of lofty stuff that I haven't actually experienced....?

I'll think about that...

So sorry, but I did not mean to imply that you have, nor do I feel that you have been insincere or 'lecturish'.

What I am trying to point out is that whether you realize it or not, what you post of your true struggles is precious to others, and not just an unburdening for your own heart. So keep at it, please.

I wish I had a private "Dov-Translator", to fill me in on what Dov is really heading at, I am often unsure of what you mean to convey with your words....

Take a number, buddy, it's apparently hopeless...oh, and I've got ticket # 163 in the back there, wearing the khaki bekeshah...

To me it seems like you are trying to point out something non-positive that I should change....Oops. PLease see the above. I plead the....what ammendment is for my own goofiness again?

To confess the truth, the Hashkafic haoros I wrote on this thread was about me....

about me expressing my dilemmas, my uncertainties, and stuff I am trying to figure out....ibid

I have no idea if it will or will not help others...nochamul ibid

I just know that I have a partially warped image of G-d, and I was trying to see what the non-warped image of G-d would look like....

My sponsor told me something funny once. He said that if he could change the Steps he'd make them read instead of "We made a decision to place our will and lives under the care of the G-d of our understanding," to "the G-d of our mis*understanding!" I think it's hilarious, and very true.

When Yirmiyah hanavi tells us that the ones who Hashem considers praiseworthy are those who "know Him", and refers to great people as "yod'ei Hashem", it means to me that such a thing - to come to really know Hashem a bit - is probably nearer to the end of lifetime developing as a yid. It is not necessarily gonna there at the beginning and certainly not a prerequisite to true, deep, and joyous avodas Hashem for most yidden!

So we are relatively blind, quite stupid, and bumble through this upward climb called life, even as frum yidden. The road to shleimus is always a long struggle to draw nearer to our upper selves. And we are pretty blind to that, too! Boy, do we need Hashem down here! But that's the name of the game. To me, the only other choice is to be going in the completely wrong direction altogether! As Vince Lombardi would say, "winning isn't everything - it's the only thing." If this one's a slog, then any other path really sucks. So don't ask scotty to 'beam you up', just yet.

I have a blockage to be able to simply say a She'hokol like I am talking to someone....Blockage, schmockage, just have some Woodford with Bards, you'll get over it quicker than you can say, "But I hate burbon!".

So I turn to the mind to try and figure out what this blockage is and how I can work around it...

I need to define in order to defeat....

Feel like I'm chasing my tale (tail? Haha!) here...Have you ever seen a dog or cat do that? They always do it faster and faster. The trick is to slow down. If you chase your tale slowly enough, you'll probably stop and come to your senses. I think that really means something, though I'm not exactly sure what....can I borrow that translator now?

=====
=====

Re: A Messed Up Image of Hashem

Posted by trying123 - 14 Mar 2010 03:35

---

dov wrote on 12 Mar 2010 00:36:

Dear Tried-123,

Your stuff is in black, and mine's in blue. Together, we are black-and-blue! Enjoy!

Tried-123 wrote on 11 Mar 2010 23:37:

dov wrote on 11 Mar 2010 18:24:

So, all your struggles and pain will help someone someday, for certain.

Your deep hashkafic he'aros? - maybe they will, maybe they won't.

Do you think I posted a lot of lofty stuff that I haven't actually experienced....?

I'll think about that...

So sorry, but I did not mean to imply that you have, nor do I feel that you have been insincere or 'lecturish'.

What I am trying to point out is that whether you realize it or not, what you post of your true struggles is precious to others, and not just an unburdening for your own heart. So keep at it, please.

I wish I had a private "Dov-Translator", to fill me in on what Dov is really heading at, I am often unsure of what you mean to convey with your words....

Take a number, buddy, it's apparently hopeless...oh, and I've got ticket # 163 in the back there, wearing the khaki bekeshah...

To me it seems like you are trying to point out something non-positive that I should change....Oops. Please see the above. I plead the.....what amendment is for my own goofiness again?

To confess the truth, the Hashkafic haoros I wrote on this thread was about me....

about me expressing my dilemmas, my uncertainties, and stuff I am trying to figure out....ibid

I have no idea if it will or will not help others...nochamul ibid

I just know that I have a partially warped image of G-d, and I was trying to see what the non-warped image of G-d would look like....

My sponsor told me something funny once. He said that if he could change the Steps he'd make them read instead of "We made a decision to place our will and lives under the care of the G-d of our understanding," to "the G-d of our misunderstanding!" I think it's hilarious, and very true.

When Yirmiyah hanavi tells us that the ones who Hashem considers praiseworthy are those who "know Him", and refers to great people as "yod'ei Hashem", it means to me that such a thing - to come to really know Hashem a bit - is probably nearer to the end of lifetime developing as a yid. It is not necessarily gonna there at the beginning and certainly not a prerequisite to true, deep, and joyous avodas Hashem for most yidden!

So we are relatively blind, quite stupid, and bumble through this upward climb called life, even as from yidden. The road to shleimus is always a long struggle to draw nearer to our upper selves. And we are pretty blind to that, too! Boy, do we need Hashem down here! But that's the name of the game. To me, the only other choice is to be going in the completely wrong direction altogether! As Vince Lombardi would say, "winning isn't everything - it's the only thing." If this one's a slog, then any other path really sucks. So don't ask scotty to 'beam you up', just yet.

I have a blockage to be able to simply say a She'hokol like I am talking to someone....Blockage, schmockage, just have some Woodford with Bards, you'll get over it quicker than you can say, "But I hate burbon!".

So I turn to the mind to try and figure out what this blockage is and how I can work around it...

I need to define in order to defeat....

Feel like I'm chasing my tale (tail? Haha!) here...Have you ever seen a dog or cat do that? They always do it faster and faster. The trick is to slow down. If you chase your tale slowly enough, you'll probably stop and come to your senses. I think that really means something, though I'm not exactly sure what.....can I borrow that translator now?

Dov:

You are hereby presented with the Nobel prize in the field of "Dov-Translating"..... :D

I am starting to realize that Learning about G-d is a lifetimes work...

And besides, I think my blockage is not in thought but in in emotion...

It's a symptom of the problem, not the problem...

I think :-\ :-\ :-\ :-\

=====
=====

Re: A Messed Up Image of Hashem
Posted by silentbattle - 14 Mar 2010 05:21

---

Is it possible to remind yourself how much hashem loves you? In other words, a few times a day, when something nice happens, remind yourself that it's coming from hashem?

Or even just remind yourself that although we can't always understand it, hashem loves me, and I know he does. And really feel it.

=====

Re: A Messed Up Image of Hashem
Posted by trying123 - 14 Mar 2010 05:23

---

silentbattle wrote on 14 Mar 2010 05:21:

Is it possible to remind yourself how much hashem loves you? In other words, a few times a day, when something nice happens, remind yourself that it's coming from hashem?

Or even just remind yourself that although we can't always understand it, hashem loves me, and I know he does. And really feel it.

No :-[ :-[ :-[

=====

Re: A Messed Up Image of Hashem
Posted by Dov - 14 Mar 2010 19:04

---

Gevalt! OK, so yo say SB's thing is out of your reach right now. OK.

I know a guy who got better just by saying the words when he really needed to. It went something like this: "G-d, if You are listening, please take away my lust/resentment/fear/(whatever) - because I have plenty, and that is the problem here - not yenem, nor my circumstances....G-d, if You love me, then please help me know that You love me....G-d, help me actually have the gratitude I can have to You. I don't want to work hard on anything, I just want You to give all these things to me with the smallest amount of work possible, by me."

Nu. What do you have to lose? Do you think it's chuzpadikeh to talk to Hashem this way?

If so, I propose to you that he sees our hearts, not just our words. And our hearts do just this *all the time! When we are impatient, we are saying to Hashem: "Well? What's taking You so long?!" When our stomachs hurt we tend to get very upset about it - we don't accept it be'ahava (meaning full acceptance that it's Hashem's best plan for us). Our rage is always a nasty way to say to Hashem (in our feelings) something like: "What the h--I are You doing?! Do You have any idea how much this hurts!!". Why else doe we ever get angry about anything?

Nu. That's what I think. Maybe I'm totally cracked.

So, why keep lying to Hashem if you are already saying it to Him and he knows it? Let it out as a son talks to his father. If you feel you can't do that yet, then you can at least ask Him to help you out so that one day you will ~~be able to~~ talk to Him like a son talks to a father.

Who says we need the whole package, or nothing? Trying is surely worth something.

=====
=====

Re: A Messed Up Image of Hashem
Posted by trying123 - 15 Mar 2010 02:37

---

I haven't gone to shul on a weekday in a good couple of months... I find it impossible to even Daven alone....

The one thing I make sure to do No matter what is to put on Tefilin...

I know you that many of you guys wont understand me here... But I know myself quiet well, I am not fooling myself... I simply can not talk to Hashem.... In my heart I am aching to be able to...

Thing is that on Shabbos I try very hard to go to people (Not good to be alone, also I fear that being so so bored will make Shemiras Shabbos very hard...

Anyway, When I am by other people I kind of have to go to shul...

This past Shabbos during Davening I was looking through various Tefilos that we say I was trying to connect with something...

It got me so frustrated, because I was definitely not connecting ....

Most Tefilos are expressing the exact opposite of what I feel...

I don't feel like praising G-d for all the wonderful things he constantly gives me... I feel more like meeting up with him and... don't know... Maybe yell at him...?

A part of me believes that everything G-d does is for the good, but my emotions don't mach up with this...?

Maybe like Dov said: I should tell this to him.....

I will try....

On a more positive note:

Lately I find myself saying "So help me G-d"

I think those are the last words the President of the US says when he is sworn in....

A tiny step forward...

Also I believe this problem is a symptom...

Because I can not express anything to my parents... I simply do not talk to them at all....

I think that when there is a bit more understanding betw. me and my parents... that this will get easier....

I was busy today trying to get my Mother to come to family therapy...

We'll see if this works, and if it will help....

=====

Re: A Messed Up Image of Hashem

Posted by Dov - 15 Mar 2010 16:46

---

Tried-123! You are such a lucky fellow to be on the path you are on! As someone wise posted here a while ago: Where you are going is much more important than where you are coming from.

You may be in some dismay about where you are coming from right now, your track record, lack of this, and of that....but given where you are holding, your direction is just fantastic!

It's so easy to sit back and criticize another for not doing this or that, or not holding by whatever good thing.... But by the same token, it is also so natural and easy for us to bitterly criticise ourselves for what we are lacking! We are often quite damning of ourselves. Most folks destroy themselves this way, and permanently.

So, / say you are definitely one lucky guy and G-d bless you!! (the presidents also say that, I think...)

Staying on the upward path is the only thing that matters. The only thing.

Much love,

Dov

=====

Re: A Messed Up Image of Hashem
Posted by DovInIsrael - 15 Mar 2010 17:04

---

if you need to YELL at HaShem - do it!

and realize when you are done- you'll realize that he will still be there for you.

Dov in Israel

=====

Re: A Messed Up Image of Hashem
Posted by trying123 - 16 Mar 2010 06:38

---

I came across a colection of quotes that I once gathered...

Since I'm bored, and you are as well (or you wouldn't be reading this in the first place..... :D).....

Here goes:

"It is probably better to be a first rate version of yourself, instead of a second rate version of somebody else"

For the I'm Falling Thread:

"When you feel like giving up, remember why you held on for so long in the first place"

For when you are really depressed:

"If you are going through hell, keep on going" (Churchill)

My personal Favorite:

"The way to succeed is to double your error rate"

Perhaps this is what Michael Jordan meant when he said:

"I've missed more than 9000 shots in my career. I've lost almost 300 games. Twenty-six times I've been trusted to take the game winning shot and missed. I've failed over and over and over again in my life. And that is why I succeed"

"No one is perfect, that's why every pencil comes with an eraser"

"I have not failed; I have found 10,000 ways that wont work" (Thomas Edison)

"Great spirits have always encountered violent opposition from mediocre minds" (Einstein)

"Challenges are what make life interesting; overcoming them is what makes life meaningful"

When your mother-in-law offers her intelligent advice:

"I cannot give you the formula for success but I can give you the formula for failure -which is:
Try to please others/everybody"

"Success is the good fortune that comes from:

aspiration

desperation

perspiration

and inspiration"

(the desperation part is for Dov)

"Experience is the name we give our mistakes"

When you feel like you aren't getting anywhere:

"Success is the sum of small efforts repeated day after day"

For 7up:

"Sometimes the shadows of this life are caused by our standing in our own sunshine"

"The most important opinion you have -is the one you have of yourself; the most important things you say all day -are the things you say to yourself"

"Only those who do nothing at all make no mistakes; but that would be a mistake"

"Anyone who has never made a mistake has never tried anything new" (Einstein)

Save this one for your best friend:

"The meeting of two personalities is like the contact of two chemical substances: if there is any reaction, both are transformed"

The following are a bit tough in my opinion:

"A bend in the road is not the end of the road unless you fail to make the turn"

"There are two ways of meeting difficulties: You either alter the difficulties or you alter yourself to meet them"

"In order to be walked on, you have to be lying down"

=====
=====