I would need to jump a few maderegos higher... just to be able to read, much less appreciate, the beauty of what you've shared. Wow.

Thank you, BR.

thanks BR.

welcome aboard.

the scariest thing you will ever do is to face yourself. But we can help.. one step at a time...one day at a time..

Bechori Reuven, your post is very, very moving. To not even have the strength to cry? Wow.

I hope you get to that peace you're searching for. I believe it's certainly out there. I'm looking for it, too. Like Aharon haKohen, we get up and serve... again. Thank you.

G-d knows we are going to bring alot of good into this world.

Hmmm...

This is my two cents on this issue.

I have enough challenges on a day to day basis and will have these challenges all my life. I'm currently single and I will have this urge to act out until I get married and once I get married, I'll have other (greater) challenges. Looking back will do me no good. I truly believe that it's) and to work on a day to day basis. Thinking about our sins can bring yiush (and I don't see it as weakness). Refraining from negative behaviours just proves that we are serious about our regrets and our desire to move forward. Every time I stop myself is a proof that I regret my past behaviours. I think that we should look back only during the yomim noroim but not on a day to day basis.

Again, each person is different and I see from the replies that it appeals to many people. I love these forums because there are so many ideas shared and so much to learn. I thank you for sharing this with us!

important to see ourselves as beinonim all the time (not my idea

There's also another issue - I know for myself that being able to face my mistakes and sins, when other people cannot, might mean that they're not such a big deal to me - but to my friend, who realizes their true ugliness, he needs to hide from them. If I realized how awful they were, maybe I'd hide from them, too.

You've gotta be careful.

First step in teshuva (for aveiros done more than once or twice) is stopping the action. Worry about facing things and regrets later.
