i tink it meens dat we are looking in a box

we are kicking in a box, like when you read the cereal box at breakfast in the morning, except that today you can read safety messages from the Torah Safety Commision and memorize the different numbers of Hatzoloh....

As I remember, Boxing Day is real. Your explanation isn't. On Dec 26, so the story goes that I remember, all the rich folk would finally get around to BOXING up the gifts that they give to their hired help at home. (I've always wondered if it's the re-gifted stuff the kids rejected the day before. Don't know.)

Anyhow, the Brits take it seriously. No punching bags required. - Briut

#1) Hi, Dr. Briut!!

#2) Thanks for clarifying a murky matter.

Yes, the English do have it as an official Holiday. (What the Americans refer to as a "Legal Holiday" our former overlords from across the pond call a "Bank Holiday".)

FORMER OVERLORDS?? I beg your pardon!?! Did anyone perhaps notice that these are the folks who LOST the Tea Party? Overlords, indeed. (Although many in Washington would gladly give the tea party folks back to them if they'd have them.) Feh!!
