

Can "yossi's" story really be true?

Posted by trying123 - 07 Nov 2010 20:10

Have you guys read today's email?

the story about Yossi seems surreal!!!!

does anyone know first hand if it's true?

=====

=====

Re: Can "yossi's" story really be true?

Posted by jewinpain - 07 Nov 2010 21:35

Well, its a very funny story to say it mildly, but hey if reb guard put it up there must be a reason for it, don't ya think so reb tried

=====

=====

Re: Can "yossi's" story really be true?

Posted by kutan - 07 Nov 2010 21:50

Well it either is or isn't.

My vote is ...

whats the difference... someone in Yerushalayim should be able to find out...

k

=====

=====

Re: Can "yossi's" story really be true?

Posted by mnman415 - 07 Nov 2010 21:57

ya....i have no idea. i would think that it would be big new or at least little news of 200 bachrim attending a party.....but im not denying anything. it very interesting

=====

=====

Re: Can "yossi's" story really be true?
Posted by trying123 - 07 Nov 2010 22:19

I wasNt doubting it's validity so much as I was trying to hear if anyone has more details...

I mean it's a revolution!!!!

History in the making...

=====

=====

Re: Can "yossi's" story really be true?
Posted by the.guard - 08 Nov 2010 08:08

Guys, I spoke to this Bochur a number of times on the phone. Unless he's a world-class actor, it sure sounds true to me!

=====

=====

Re: Can "yossi's" story really be true?
Posted by kutan - 08 Nov 2010 13:26

Guard,

He is definitely a world class something.. that there is no doubt!

So, perhaps it is in fact world class acting?

This should be public knowledge... does anyone in the 'olam yeshivos' know first hand about this 'event'?

=====

=====

Re: Can "yossi's" story really be true?

Posted by the.guard - 08 Nov 2010 16:35

To all you skeptics out there, I just spoke to Yossi on the phone. When I told him we had some skeptics, he handed the phone over to Rav Michael Levi, a mashgiach in Medrash Shmuel and I spoke to him and he testified what great work this boy is doing, and that he was personally by the party. He also told me that the alcohol was only to make it attractive to the boys, but it was all under control drinking, not a drunken party, and there were other Rabbeim walking around talking to the boys at the parties... and there was divrei torah, talks and chizuk... Yossi also gave me the number of Rav Aurbach, Mashgiach of Torah Ohr who was also at the party and I can speak to if I want. He told me that Rav Aurbach has a program himself where he pays boys every week money to stay clean... He also offered to give me like 50 numbers of bochurim who were there, and he stressed how he has boys approaching him every day for "deals" and that he's currently paying 3 boys out of pocket (collecting here and there)...

So Nu, enough with the skepticism. Open your pockets and let's help this Tzadik! :D He wants to make another even bigger party around Chanukah time.

=====

Re: Can "yossi's" story really be true?

Posted by Stuart - 08 Nov 2010 18:43

I recall way back when in yeshiva HS, having similar bets and challenges with my friends (I never won), but never celebrating the results with a party. It does seem odd, though to fundraise for such a party, but I guess if there's one place to do it, this is it!

=====

Re: Can "yossi's" story really be true?

Posted by mnman415 - 09 Nov 2010 02:58

Stuart wrote on 08 Nov 2010 18:43:

I recall way back when in yeshiva HS,

when you say HS are you refering to high school or to hashems soldier? :D

=====

=====