In order to solve the problem of cell phones getting misplaced & missing when we need them, a new invention has been patented. All phones will have a cradle to which they will be attached to via a cord. The only way to end a call will be through returning the telephone to its base. When the cradle will be mounted on the wall this process will be referred to as "hanging up the phone".

The base/cradle will be connected to the wall by a wire too, to minimize the chances of that also getting lost.
