Generated: 22 July, 2025, 21:23

Chizuk picks from the Daf Yomi Posted by doingtshuva - 07 Jan 2020 23:43

As one who just started the new cycle of the Daf Yomi, I thought to start a thread which brings Chizuk for our struggles from the Daf.

Everyone is welcome to share post and get inspired.

The general rule of GYE in this section of the forum.

Im Paga be'cha menuval zeh, mushchei'hu le- BEIS HAMEDRASH! This board is for divrei Torah relating to our struggle with the Yetzer Hara, from the entire spectrum of Tanach, Chazal, Mussar and Chassidus.

On this board there will be no posts about personal struggles and no debates. Only TORAH CHIZUK.

====

Re: Chizuk picks from the Daf Yomi Posted by im-ready - 08 Jan 2020 14:14

Ive been hearing alot on these forums that we need to fight but the goal is not to win.

Lets not lose focus the goal is to fight AND WIN and we need to use the tools that Hashem gave us and his Torah to accomplish this goal in todays daf brachot daf R Levi bar Chama says hey it says a person should always fight his yetzer horah and if he wins great, if not learn torah, if he still doesnt win read shema, and if he still didnt win the yetzer horah think of death.

so obviously we need to stay focused on the goal of winning and not just fighting as and end goal in itself ...and losing

Another point in regards to what @im-ready wrote:

How do we figure out whether a sweeping, instantaneous change is a good idea? If the person wants to leave the bad behind and believes he can succeed, he should try it. But if he doubts he has the strength to pull it off, or if he is not sure he wants to give up his old ways, this method is unlikely to work. He should not expect himself to be instantly changed. Without that initial burst of energy, he probably won't be able to break free in one shot. He must plan accordingly and change gradually instead.

Thus, a plan involving gradual change often is the best way to attain self-control. If a person just "does not feel it," it will be hard for him to change his life. Though he knows he should stop sinning, he might not have the strength to sustain such a big change. But because deep down he wants to be good and do what's right, he can set up a plan to change his behavior step by step until he achieves his goals. This method requires much less motivation and willpower than instantaneous, complete change.

Gradual change is a system that requires a plan.

Although randomly stopping one element of the problem is commendable, we strive for even more: to begin a progression toward complete self-control. We want to plan out what we will change and when. We should be flexible about it, but we must remember that we do aspire to reach the pinnacle one day.

====

Re: Chizuk picks from the Daf Yomi

Posted by doingtshuva - 08 Jan 2020 23:56

When we study halachos in depth, Hashem minimizes the yetzer hara in that area. Thus, learning the halachos of desire is quite helpful. Studying the halachos of a sin also impresses upon us that it really is forbidden, and creates a commitment not to do it. It no longer feels like theoretical knowledge that this is something we shouldn't do. It feels real. This gives us the strength to stand up to our yetzer hara and confidently tell him no.

====

Re: Chizuk picks from the Daf Yomi Posted by navigo - 10 Sep 2020 07:32

