

My two "Chiddushim"

Posted by Chachaman - 22 Feb 2012 23:32

I haven't look through all of the threads, and I'm not nearly that knowledgeable, so I apologize if what I say here has been said elsewhere.

#1: We say in Krias Shema al Hamitta: "Master of the Universe, I forgive who angered or mocked me, or sinned against me, whether in my body, property, honor, or whatever I have."

Most important of all, you are forgiving YOURSELF, since you have certainly been angered by your actions, thoughts, etc. sometimes! You forgive yourself each night: don't let the baggage from yesterday hold you back today, for you have forgiven yourself and you can begin anew.

#2: This is something I use as motivation whenever I feel tempted. God knows the inner thoughts of man: we say that several times during davening. Whenever I begin to have improper thoughts, and may you also remember to do this, I think that God is watching. How can I let my mind water and humiliate myself before the Holy One Blessed Be He!

I hope you found these thoughts slightly useful, inspirational, or what have you. Again, I apologize if these are mentioned else where, but Ba'anियus Da'ati these are my thoughts.

=====
=====

Re: My two "Chiddushim"

Posted by tehylimzugger - 23 Feb 2012 15:23

no aniyus bedaatcha!

You seem to be a Chacham, Man!

=====
=====

Re: My two "Chiddushim"

Posted by ezra ashbourne - 06 Mar 2012 21:55

i found your words very inspiratinoal, chachaman. simple & very emesdik.

=====
=====

Re: My two "Chiddushim"
Posted by ontheedgeman - 07 Mar 2012 03:04

HaChacham, HaGaon, v'Hatzadik!

=====
=====