Want to Marry woman without experience
Posted by 26yroldstudent - 18 Jan 2012 22:15

_____

Hi, First time poster here. I'm a Baal Teshuva, 26 year old learning in yeshiva in Jerusalem, have been frum for a few years but only made it to yeshiva last summer.

Despite my having been with women in college, I've very reluctant to date a girl who's been in serious relationship (aka had sex) before becoming religious, so basically, most BT girls.

I realize that I might be hypocritical, but I really don't want to marry a girl with a sexual history. When I think about how serious the act of intimacy is, and how previous relationship really leave a scar on your soul, psychology, etc, I think that it with would be very hard for me to want to marry someone with such a history.

Is this normal? Am I allowed to feel this way? Am I obsessed with this?

I'd probably rather marry someone raised "modern orthodox" and compromise a little bit religiously, than marry a girl who who is very frum now, but has a sexual history.

Are FFB girls my only option at this point?

===
====

Re: Want to Marry woman without experience
Posted by ontheedgeman - 07 Feb 2012 19:50

_____

It was a sweet point Dov. I agree, part of the problem is that I dream and fantasize about just acquiring one idea, having one moment, hearing one Dvort, that will change my thinking and compulsions, and put me on the lofty madrega I need to be, compulsion-free. I'm lazy, I don't want to do the hard work, I just want that ONE big idea, that ONE holy, inspirational thought that will connect me to the Ein Sof so that I'll never let go of Gcd, I'll be awakened and there won't be a need for the hard work anymore, since I'll be free of addiction.

But all this too, it's a dream... a search for the "idea drug" that will cure me, the magic pill of a thought, all I need to do is sit for 5 minutes, think it, and I'll be free... I guess this is the dream of all addicts.

==
====