

First post. Don't know where to turn.

Posted by FoxTrot - 15 Feb 2012 04:25

BH

I have found this site and after just reading some of the guidebook, i have been clean for two weeks. I have been sunk in to this mess for as long as I can remember, even as much so as showing this stuff to my little brother when I myself was just in seventh grade. While I'm certain it wasn't an addiction then, I do know that when I bought my first personal laptop of my own, it quickly developed. Ive tried, to no avail to kick this Which is funny, Ive managed to cut back drinking and have completely quit smoking in the interim.

Lately, I have found myself making my schedules around "the activity" and it was making me crazy. I was doing at work, at home, on the road, wherever. And i found it harder and harder to satisfy myself. Recently I saw a couple of posts regarding kicking the addiction on news websites and message boards. I felt it was talking to me and visited this website.

It has been a rough two weeks. Truthfully, the first week was pretty easy, relatively, this last week has been amazingly difficult. I keep looking for excuses, or better yet, justifications. Or even better, I keep looking for something/someone to tell me thats its okay to do it, just now, just this once. Thats terrible!

I keep searching the message boards looking for posts saying thats its okay. I have slipped the last week, but Baruch Hashem have not fallen. I have stepped up learning every day, davening with minyan which I wasn't doing before and speaking more with friends.

I need chizuk! I need people! But I don't know who I can turn to in real life. I'm afraid! I don't know what I would say. My father is a recovering Alcoholic, but it would kill him if I told him. Or would it? An uncle? a co-wroker? I don't know! Additionally, I'm so deadly scared of putting a filter o my comp as I'm afraid someone will see it and inquire as to why its there. What would I answer?!

So far i'm this two weeks clean. Without 12 step, just kabolos ol and the 90-day count. can it hold? I know I want it to, but I also know I wouldn't mind a fall, sadly! (Very sadly!)

Shalom to all my brothers in this with me. Looking to you for support, its not coming from anywhere else but Hakadosh baruch hu at this point!

=====

Re: First post. Don't know where to turn.
Posted by FoxTrot - 20 Feb 2012 05:33

Again, thanks everyone for reaching out. I have since been in contact with another addict that I was put in touch with by a local organization. I also met with people at the organization and discussed. It felt good to discuss with actual people. Realizing everyday more and more that this is a process and not an overnight solve.

Will be taking these steps of speaking to people and communicating with my 'sponsor' a little further and see what develops. I have gotten filters (with thanks to the filter gabai) on my computer. Things are happening, B"H.

After I am in a routine with these important steps, I will discuss with my father, whom I have decided is probably the best person for me to talk to. He will be visiting me in a couple weeks, i plan to discuss with him then.

=====

Re: First post. Don't know where to turn.
Posted by tehylimzugger - 20 Feb 2012 11:51

kol hakavod and KOP

=====

Re: First post. Don't know where to turn.
Posted by alexeliezer - 20 Feb 2012 16:34

Sounds like the big truck is startin' to roll...

=====
=====

Re: First post. Don't know where to turn.

Posted by FoxTrot - 28 Feb 2012 04:15

Hello. me again. I had been clean for another two weeks until a a fall tonight. I think I need to post here and read others posts more often. I am speaking to others off the forum as well. Looking for a sponsor. I'm still trying to wrap my head around the 12-step program... what exactly it is and how exactly it helps.

=====
=====

Re: First post. Don't know where to turn.

Posted by ontheedgeman - 28 Feb 2012 04:40

The 12 steps will help you come to realize that you haven't been surrendering yourself and your troubles to Gcd, rather, you have more likely been trying to manipulate H" to get your fix.

Admitting you're powerless over MZL or whatever your fix happens to be, means accepting a few things about yourself that you might not want to accept. and that is the first step. If you can admit you're powerless, it changes the ball game. That which has been rendered impure by fire must be purified by fire. All the segulos won't help until you help yourself with the help of Gcd. and the Big Book of Alcoholics Anonymous, the Attitudes Book found on this site, are the first steps towards awakening to the addiction and the challenge of living 24 hours at a time, and getting Gcd back into your life.

Try getting on your knees now, and actually praying to Gcd that you are surrendering yourself to Him for the next 24 hours, and that you offer your entire being to Him, just for one day, and that you ask for His illumination in every decision you make, for one day. Try it now, get on on the floor. I'll wait.

Okay done? no, didn't think so. Why? Procrastinating? can't let go? Well, then let's try again.

The point is, you must mamash surrender and offer your entire body like a korban to H".

Chadesh yameinu kekedem, every day requires renewal to 24 hours of not going to shmutz, not doing MZL which puts a coats a barrier between ourselves and the Ayn Sof.

Get on the floor and say:

Hashem, I offer myself to You - to build with me and to do with me as You will. Relieve me of the bondage of self, that I may better do Your will. Take away my difficulties that victory over them may bear witness to those I would help of Your Power, Your Love, and Your Way of life. May I do

Your will always!

And help me be a Jew with all my bones, for 24 hours!

=====

Re: First post. Don't know where to turn.
Posted by alexeliezer - 28 Feb 2012 18:25

Foxtrot wrote on 28 Feb 2012 04:15:

I think I need to post here and read others posts more often. I am speaking to others off the forum as well. Looking for a sponsor. I'm still trying to wrap my head around the 12-step program... what exactly it is and how exactly it helps.

I agree. Do something for your recovery every day. Not just to stay sober, but to truly grow into the wonderful, giving human being you have the potential to be.

=====

Re: First post. Don't know where to turn.
Posted by FoxTrot - 05 Mar 2012 04:48

I know I haven't been posting much. Ive been going through a lot in life. I went back and forth inside the head, to tell or not to tell my father. Himself being a recovering addict (alcohol), I felt it would be a good idea. Others i spoke to were split on weather I should or shouldn't. I was told by one person I spoke with on the phone that I should only "admit" to another person within the same addiction. another professional whom I met in person thought I should tell dad.

Well, either way, dad came to visit. After four days, I decided I would tell him. Wow. What relief. Got that off my back. It already feels better. And even more so, don't know why, but dad informed me that he himself also goes to SA meetings! That automatically made me feel better from the get go. I am glad I chose to tell him. His experience and wisdom, as well as the fact that i now know we share this issue, i'm sure will help me through this.

Planning to hit my first SA meeting this week iy'h...

A frelichen Purim to all!

=====

Re: First post. Don't know where to turn.
Posted by gibbor120 - 05 Mar 2012 15:27

gibbor120 wrote on 15 Feb 2012 15:01:

Foxtrot wrote on 15 Feb 2012 04:25:

I need chizuk! I need people! But I don't know who I can turn to in real life. I'm afraid! I don't know what I would say. My father is a recovering Alcoholic, but it would kill him if I told him. Or would it? An uncle? a co-wroker? I don't know! Additionally, I'm so deadly scared of putting a filter o my comp as I'm afraid someone will see it and inquire as to why its there. What would I answer?!

WELCOME! You are in the right place. You are afraid to tell someone in real life, but I am telling you that is one of the BIG keys to recovery. I have yet to find anyone post on this forum that they told someone and it was a big mistake. All the posts I have read say it was a BIG relief and they should have done it sooner.

That is my experience as well. My wife found out first and it was hell for a while. Again, as many have experienced, it turned out to be the biggest bracha! We spoke with our rav and that was a big help. You can't do this yourself. You will need real help from real people. The good news is that with their help, this struggle becomes sooooo much easier.

You say that your father is a recovering alcaholic. He may be the perfect person to tell. This is also an addiction and he may understand you better than you think.

I'm glad you told him!!! That is BIG!

=====

Re: First post. Don't know where to turn.
Posted by FoxTrot - 20 Mar 2012 03:53

BH

Shalom everyone. Been a while since my last post. The struggle continues but it's important to know that there is an end in sight. There is a way out.

Tonight I attended, for the first time, an SA meeting. Things i drew comfort from ranged from hearing others talk, meeting other addicts and even seeing people I know there. Also seeing that 90% of the people at the meeting were frume yidden as well gave me an odd sense of peace. They were welcoming beyond belief. This fellowship of people struggling just like me lead me to believe that-together-we can all find our way out.

I look forward to going to another meeting. Then another. I hope to continue my journey, with the assistance of others, here and there.

One day at a time folks! For today, I'm sober. I'm hoping and praying that tomorrow G-d gives me the power and ability to remain sober once again.

Thanks for listening.

=====

Re: First post. Don't know where to turn.
Posted by mifatfait - 20 Mar 2012 07:29

Hey Fox,

I was wondering what was going on with you. Great to hear your going foward.

Your fellow begginer,

MB

=====

Re: First post. Don't know where to turn.
Posted by FoxTrot - 04 Apr 2012 21:15

Hello everyone. Me again. Haven't been on the forum in a while (Frankly, Ive been spending less and less time on the computer... its a good thing!).

I have started to attend SA meetings. This has been the biggest blessing. Getting my problems out there in a group of people that have similar issues has been amazing. It really works!

Today, I was having a lot of downtime. Downtime for me means looking for ways/excuses/rationalizations to act out. I figured, instead of that, let me call someone. Let me see if this really works! IT does!

I wish everyone a kosher Freylichen Pesach!

=====

Re: First post. Don't know where to turn.
Posted by alexeliezer - 04 Apr 2012 21:38

Good to hear. Thanks for the update.

You're committed. You're working a proven program.

I have not doubt you will succeed.

One day at a time.

Have a wonderful Yom Tov!

=====