

Returning

Posted by ToAdd - 18 Jul 2013 11:23

---

Hi all

Well, here's the short story: I'm a mess.

I've been away from this site for a long time (over a year now), but I need to get back on the right path.

I've slipped, I've fallen, I've run out of energy to care anymore.

There's just a little bit left to reach out my hand and say "hey, I can't do this anymore. I can't do this alone."

I'm looking at things I shouldn't almost daily now. It's costing me sleep, work and sanity.

I'm wasting my time, and that's the only thing in life we can never get back.

The part of me that wants to get better is shrinking and the part that couldn't care less about anything is growing.

I need a friend that knows what this is like, that can help me get going again.

ToAdd

=====
=====

Re: Returning

Posted by ToAdd - 13 Aug 2013 14:19

---

ZemirosShabbos wrote:

ToAdd wrote:

I'm going to start small - a pleasant greeting, a good wish.

wise words!

Thank you. I think this is indeed a good place to start.

Too often I fail because I take on more than I can handle.

I'm pretty sure that everyone will agree that you can't try fix everything in one day.

I now have a new motto: Don't try fix it all in one day, try fix it for one day.

=====

Re: Returning

Posted by ToAdd - 14 Aug 2013 09:42

---

Day two.

So far so good.

Been a bit aggro, RID I suppose.

I'm battling to function normally, to focus.

I feel like I need a holiday, a break.

I haven't had one in a long time.

Perhaps even just a good night's sleep.

I have 3 kids under the age of 3 and a dog that decided to wake us up at 1:30am.

Is it really that tough though, or am I just making excuses?

This is when I'm normally most tempted, when things get tough and I need an escape.

I can do this, I can survive today.

Good post: simonsarris.com/blog/590-be-positive

Yosef.

=====

Re: Returning

Posted by chesky - 15 Aug 2013 02:44

---

ToAdd wrote:

This is when I'm normally most tempted, when things get tough and I need an escape.

I can do this, I can survive today.

I could do with that positiveness

Good post: simonsarris.com/blog/590-be-positive

Yosef,

I admire your perseverance and determination.

Just to share with you what works for me or rather what did not work for me.

You say that you could do with positiveness. For a long time i tried identifying which moods made me act out and tried to avoid those moods. I learnt the hard way that good moods never last, however hard i tried. Inevitably something will happen to change my mood, beyond my control. So if my sobriety depends on keeping myself in a positive mood, I have no chance.

(i also became aware that I am equally powerless over being happy as i am over being low, so i was really stuck).

I am thankfully aware today that i am a human being with mood swings and many different situations, many of which i cannot anticipate or control. And today i accept that that is who i am, and that yes, on my own i cannot control my moods or my emotions.

But I have learnt that I don't have to worry, because my Abba takes care of me, if I make a decision to give my life and will to His care today.

=====

Re: Returning

Posted by cordnoy - 15 Aug 2013 07:46

---

chesky wrote:

But I have learnt that I don't have to worry, because my Abba takes care of me, if I make a decision to give my life and will to His care today.

So you made that decision...that is impressive...I wish I could as well. but tell me please, after you came to that conclusion, how did He help you? Many people are writing here that they have urges and desires and tayvos and they cant control themselves...and then they fall, but b"H, they get back up again. You write: Come to the conclusion that you are powerless without a higher authority (first of the steps) and Abba will take care. I am not poking fun c"v. But please tell us: what happens practically at that moment of desire? What does He do to prevent the fall?

I hope you will explain somewhat; thank you so much

=====

Re: Returning

Posted by ToAdd - 15 Aug 2013 10:17

---

Thanks Chesky.

I was aware of the mood I was in and I think that helped me remain clean.

I made practical steps to deal with the situation:

I went for a walk, thinking about what to do. Based mostly on some advice I found online, I thought about the following 3 things:

1) Focus, set clear goals.

Picture yourself as you would like to be, not where you are.

If you are driving a car and you focus entirely on a pole, you are going to hit that pole. Rather focus on where you want to go and you will go there.

2) Get the best help / tools

What do you need to get to where you want to be?

3) Resolve inner conflicts

These hold you back.

Instead of viewing myself as a sad, lost little person who's unwilling to improve, I pictured myself as a successful man who is busy helping and enjoying without time to look at smut.

What do I need? I need help from the outside, some friends I can talk to, people that can teach me what they know. The forums help, but what I really need is someone I can talk to face to face.

I then moved on to identifying points of inner conflict:

I want to be faithful to my wife while I want an imaginary girlfriend.

I want to be successful but I want to sit in comfort and not exert myself.

I want to interact but most of my friends now mainly interact through facebook and that place is a deathtrap for me.

Some good stuff in there. I definitely have some inner conflicts that I need to sort out. I need to identify each point of conflict and decide which is the right way to go.

Some are obvious while I'm sure there are many I have not identified.

Some are easy to change, while others are set in habit or indoctrinated.

I would love to just hand this problem over to Abba. "Abba, you look after me so that I can get on with life." But this IS life. I know it will turn out Good because Abba is there, but this is a challenge he gave me. If I put in my part, then Abba will ensure that the outcome is Good, even if it is not what I think Good is.

Thank you Abba, I love You!

=====

Re: Returning

Posted by chesky - 15 Aug 2013 11:18

---

[quote="cordnoy" post=216228]chesky wrote:

but tell me please, after you came to that conclusion, how did He help you? Many people are writing here that they have urges and desires and tayvos and they cant control themselves...and then they fall, but b"H, they get back up again. You write: Come to the conclusion that you are powerless without a higher authority (first of the steps) and Abba will take care. I am not poking fun c"v. But please tell us: what happens practically at that moment of desire? What does He do to prevent the fall?

I hope you will explain somewhat; thank you so much

I appreciate your questions, and i will try to share what i can to the best of my ability. Before I do i ask HaShem to please guide me.

i want to make clear that I am not an authority on any of this. i am a sexaholic who learnt the hard way that i cannot stay clean and certainly not live a life of sanity on my own without acting out. I can only share my own experience.

I want to share a conversation I had with my wife, who for reasons that are beyond me accepted the fact that she lives her life with someone who goes two or three times a week to meetings with sexaholics and has a sponsor etc.

So, we were discussing an issue about which we were pretty stuck deciding how to handle and we both agreed that we did not have a way out. So i suggested that we accept the fact that we are incapable of handling the situation and ask HaShem to be with us and guide us.

To which she said "Yes, but bottom line, what will He do?" and I explained that if I knew the answer to that I would not need Him,in fact I would be competing with Him.

The point I am making is that when I turn my life and will to G-d for today, I do so EVEN THOUGH I AM SURE THERE IS NOTHING THAT CAN BE DONE. I can have a terrible urge to lust (in my head, not after triggering myself, that's different), and I am obsessed and absolutely convinced that if i don't get my fix, NOTHING will help me and I am SURE that there is nothing G-d can do to save me either.

BUT, I have come to believe that HE CAN. It began with seeing other members at meetings who are clean today for no other explanation other than by the grace of G-d.

Do you think that when i accept HaShem's will for today, that a malach comes down and gives me a kiss to make me feel better? Or if I missed the bus and i am powerless over my frustration that the bus turns around and comes back to pick me up?

Sorry to disappoint you. I have no fancy stories of nissim for you. But the biggest miracle is that I am clean today and despite the fact the i do not act out, i am still alive and functioning. Now that might not like such an amazing achievement, but statistically if for almost twenty years i could not stay clean for more that a few days, then that is a miracle.

So stop thinking what He can do to help you. That is why He is G-d and not you. Accept the fact that TODAY you cannot be clean on your own (not after 120 days), and TALK TO HIM. Tell Him that it is so hard you will never make it, that you are going to die without it, that you are angry with Him (if you feel that way), that you are thankful...tell him all your emotions... and you may find that you do NOT NEED TO act-out.

=====

Re: Returning
Posted by chesky - 15 Aug 2013 11:23

---

ToAdd wrote:

"Abba, you look after me so that I can get on with life." But this IS life. I know it will turn out Good because Abba is there, but this is a challenge he gave me. If I put in my part, then Abba will ensure that the outcome is Good, even if it is not what I think Good is.

Thank you Abba, I love You!

Thank you Yosef for this.

May He be with us and grant us a clean and sane day.

=====

Re: Returning

Posted by cordnoy - 15 Aug 2013 17:24

---

thank you for the response

my post was lost as ie crashed in the middle several points:

1. in my 60 clean days, my urges and desires have been very few
2. that might be why G-d is not forefront in my brain
3. I know that I am powerless myself to stop this behavior
4. I have asked Him several times to help
5. I am not an imbecile (I am other things), so I do not entertain thoughts of 'kochi v'otzem yadi.'
6. the part of what can He do if I wanna act out, where you wrote that this is not our field, I appreciate that immensely.

7. my main point is what was the concrete step that you on this world took thru the help of G-d that could have been the catalyst for your stopping?

thank you again

=====

Re: Returning

Posted by ZemirosShabbos - 15 Aug 2013 20:52

---

Thank you Chesky for writing such a clear and methodical post. Thank you cordnoy for your well-placed questions. I am learning from the two of you.

=====

Re: Returning

Posted by gibbor120 - 15 Aug 2013 21:01

---

cordnoy wrote:

5. I am not an imbecile (I am other things), so I do not entertain thoughts of 'kochi v'otzem yadi.'

Kochi v'otzem yadi has nothing to do with intelligence. We may know in our minds that we are dependant on Hashem, but we do not live with that knowledge. We don't experience it in our emotions. It doesn't guide the way we act.

=====

Re: Returning

Posted by chesky - 16 Aug 2013 03:03

---

cordnoy wrote:

7. my main point is what was the concrete step that you on this world took thru the help of G-d that could have been the catalyst for your stopping?

Concrete steps?

For me it meant going to SA meetings, and sharing with live people my admission of powerlessness over lust, my emotions and many other things in my life.

Unfortunately there are no short cuts, at least for me. I am sure that there are other ways but that is what worked for me.

Thank you for reminding me of this. May HaShem be with us and grant us a clean and sane day.

=====
=====

Re: Returning

Posted by cordnoy - 16 Aug 2013 07:18

---

gibbor, what I meant was that some might say that it is their own strength and power that wins the battle over lust, without assistance from the One Above..I am not enough of an imbecile to say that.

=====
=====

Re: Returning

Posted by ToAdd - 16 Sep 2013 15:41

---

Okay, I'm back on this thread.

I had a couple of falls last week but it's time to move on.

Yom Kippur was very good for me and has given me a fresh start.

Forgiving oneself is also an important part of recovering.

So according to my calendar, that makes today day 3.

Why did I fall this time?

I was off from work, sick. Lying in bed, alone, bored.

The first day I was just browsing the net and eventually ended up in the deep end.

The second day was intentional.

Does that mean the first fall was not intentional? No, not at all. I was browsing with lust on my mind, telling myself "no", but acting out "YES".

I did have stuff to do, but now I had time off.

I guess that to me it meant time off from everything.

Putting it all together, I realize that this comes down to the basics of how a person works...

I am a lump of dirt, animated by an animal.

Riding that animal is "me".

If I sit back and relax, that animal is going to run off and do what it's habituated to do. My job here is to guide and train that animal to do good things and reject the bad.

To sum it up: I am not in a position where I can simply sit back and relax and not work on myself. If I let go of the reins, I will end up in the dirt.

=====

Re: Returning

Posted by AlexEliezer - 17 Sep 2013 19:40

---

I'm 4.5 years sober and I still won't let myself get on the computer at home if my wife isn't home.

=====