It certainly is hard to start here. You're not sure where to begin.

How bout you tell the chushuve oilom a little about yourself. No identifying details necessary. You can start by declaring allegiance to Wooford Reserve hey, great first step. the initial "coming out" (for the lack of a better term), can be really hard. i just joined here a couple weeks ago and i feel like part of one big happy family. the guys here are great, they are a massive help. i am still struggling but i feel so much more positive these days. i feel much less guilt, its amazing. keep in touch as much as you can, in can really help you.

as they say, KOT! (keep on trucking). btw there are approximately 8,000,000,000,000 private jokes on here, so u may not know what they are talking about all the time.

You already started by admitting that once you start lusting, you are powerless to stop.

The place to start is where lust starts -- your eyes and your mind's eye.

Guard your eyes against looking at all women unless absolutely necessary. Real women, women in pictures, faces, etc.

Work on not letting mental images and fantasies take a seat in your mind. What works for me here is to verbally surrender the images to Hashem, asking him to take them. I've turned it into a little bakasha:

Ribono Shel Olam, I am powerless over lust and my life has become unmanageable.

Only You can restore me to sanity.

I turn my life and my lust over to Your care and ask You to please heal me from this illness of lust. I don't want to lust. I only want You and a relationship with You and Your Torah. I surrender my lust to you. Please take my lust.

I say it every time a fantasy tries to take hold of my mind. Dozens of times a day if necessary.

The beginning is very difficult. Murder, actually. But it can be done. And it gets easier as it becomes automatic to look away when presented with tempting (or boring) women or pictures.

That's how to get sober.

Then there's recovery. But that's a conversation for another day.

First stop drinking.
