hi everyone!

just joined the site looks like i shouldve known about this earlier. funny i didnt hear about it from other guys in yeshiva- i guess not many know about it then. i have never used an online forum before

. i am married b"H just over a year now and i am finding myself slipping back to things i did when i was single. its funny how naive parents can be. i hope i continue being in touch with myself through the noise in life and be a AWESOME PARENT!!!!.

I JOINED CAUSE I WANNA CONTINUE LIVIN THE GOOD LIFE free and available to the people around me! i struggled when i was single starting when i got curious when i saw things when others were watching clean videos. i know bh that it could have been worse in terms of how much and content though it was worse enough and i thank hashem for not giving me the capabilities to do so. i saw for a while the ad on matzav and i had the guts to stand up and not let things continue. we have a good filter and i struggle trying not to get around it. i struggle when i feel down and weak when other things in my life make me feel crushed ex financial issues or when i feel im not being the best husband that i wanna be or the person i wanna be. especially when i feel off schedule and lost. i truly believe that hashem has given us the power to overcome and to listen to the message of the challenge that he gave to become that person that he sees in us. thanx for being out there to help me!

Welcome! Remember that marriage didn't change anything it only hurts another person: our wives. The only person who can change us is ourselves.... Wishing you a lot of hatzlocho in your journey!!

Welcome! I am single but and I try not to convince myself this will get better after marriage. It's lesson to publicize. Keep posting and keep being the great person you seem to be!
