ok i cant believe i am doing this because even though i know there are others like me i dont really believe that they are like me with my nissyonos i feel i can only get helped if i open up and i wont open up until i know that that person is like me. u have no way of really knowing that until we each spill our guts little by little. even though u know there is a lot!! if any one could some how figure out who is on the same page with me i would really really give it a shot

It was a funny (I thought so, at least) thread that cordnoy began after a member asked to specifically connect with people of his specific chassidus because he felt it would be better for his recovery.

The point trying to be made is that we're all in the same boat, regardless of the specific details.

Did you include your social security # yet?

As of now based on the information you have shared, no one knows who you are so it can be considered private in that sense. When you choose to speak to someone here we will protect your online anonymity

But from what you've told us, I don't know if you struggle with porn at all, or what...

How do you expect someone to figure out if they are the same as you?

this is public. Don't write your name. You can say, if you want, where you live (not the address)....like westgate, Lakewood, or Tulsa, Oklahoma, or like my town, anchorage, Alaska.

What is your nisayon? Cheating on taxes? Reading someone else's emails? Eating dessert on a full stomach?

Let us know. Maybe you'll find someone similar.

My boat is sailin', but if we bump into each other, I'd be happy to chat if we make it to shore alive.
