

My story

Posted by Rosh Yeshivas Chavrusa - 23 Apr 2017 14:22

I am a 20 year old Bochur in a prominent yeshiva. I am part of an online college and I run an online business so there I need for the internet. But at times when using the internet I don't use it for the soul purpose of doing my college work or business rather I will get distracted where I lose control and and fall into this foreign hole. I act weird afterwords usually and my family understands something is bothering me but I cannot express it. My problem centers around hearing curious words and trying to find out what they mean all the while understanding where they may lead. My main issue is youtube, even though I have a webchaver, youtube is not reported.and I will usually fall into a youtube "hole" when I click on one thing. I hate it. I hate it. I hate it. Every time I think I am free for a period of time it strikes again. I will say I have never viewed pornography outright rather I would watch bad movies on youtube or game walkthroughs that I was curious about all the while knowing they were less than kosher. The internet is endless so I will find trouble on places like twitter as well while convincing myself I was just checking the New York Mets twitter. Webchaver is definitely great, I definitely would be worse but I need to fill in those loopholes I was reading about on the GTE website. I look forward to working together with the others in the task of making our eyes holy.

=====

=====

Re: My story

Posted by Singularity - 25 Apr 2017 10:12

Welcome!

Don't underestimate your own Koach!!

=====

=====

Re: My story

Posted by gibbor120 - 25 Apr 2017 14:33

Rosh Yeshivas Chavrusa wrote on 25 Apr 2017 00:30:

I appreciate you reaching out but you must understand, stuff you mention in your article is so far off from me. I have never watched straight out porn or masturbated. I have issues with the internet but to such extremes? Rachmana Litzlan.

I'm not sure if you mean the "captain kirk" article.

You were vague in your description. You said

My problem centers around hearing curious words and trying to find out what they mean all the while understanding where they may lead. My main issue is youtube, even though I have a webchaver, youtube is not reported.and I will usually fall into a youtube "hole" when I click on one thing. I hate it. I hate it. I hate it. Every time I think I am free for a period of time it strikes again. I will say I have never viewed pornography outright rather I would watch bad movies on youtube or game walkthroughs that I was curious about all the while knowing they were less than kosher.

Maybe you could elaborate. What do you mean by "hearing curious words and trying to find out what they mean"? What words? How bad are they? What do they lead you to? What do you mean by "bad movies" or games that were "less than kosher"? Can you be more specific?

I will say that one thing leads to another. The Y"H says do one thing today and another tomorrow. Do you feel that things are getting worse, or staying about the same? If they are staying about the same, I'm not sure if you need this site. Maybe you just have a bad habbit and need to find a "kosher" outlet. If things are getting worse, you are spending more time, or you are searching for things that are more inappropriate, you need to find a way to stop before it gets worse. The internet is naturally addictive. It feeds our need to seek. The more we seek, the more we find, the more we seek..., and the cycle is endless because the internet is endless.

Either way, talking to someone can be helpful. Talking out a problem is helpful no matter what the problem is.

=====
=====