

unmarried lust has no cure.

Posted by unmarried - 24 Nov 2017 17:39

To claim to have a cure for a lustful unmarried man is a deception.

a lustful man must first get married and then try to cure his lustfulness.

=====
=====

Re: unmarried lust has no cure.

Posted by Markz - 24 Nov 2017 20:22

unmarried wrote on 24 Nov 2017 19:33:

Markz, the likelihood of a 54 year old orthodox jew marrying or even going out on a date is slim to none.

But when and if I do you will hear from me.

Keep us posted!

You're doomed with lust until then?

=====
=====

Re: unmarried lust has no cure.

Posted by serenity - 24 Nov 2017 20:45

Welcome Unmarried. I agree, if some of the single guys who are sober would share their experience strength and hope it would be more helpful to you. The raw fact as shared by the experiences of 100's of people is that marriage didn't help and often made things worse. The important thing though is that many single men and many married men have found recovery. Maybe some if the single guys can pipe in and share. I know of some on Duvid Chaim's call and if you called in and shared I'm sure they would share back.

=====
=====

Re: unmarried lust has no cure.

Posted by MayanHamisgaber - 25 Nov 2017 17:18

Welcome dear friend

Your pain and loneliness is apparent in your posts and I hope you can find peace soon

I do not want to get involved with the debate but would like to share something from this week

This week was our 4th anniversary and obviously we were together. This Friday night when I went to learn my wife told me to wake her when I come home. When I came home, not at a late time, she was sleeping so I read something in bed for a little she woke up and I could see she was very tired and asked her straight to the point. She said she feels bad she is so tired so I told her that she does not need to feel bad as she is pregnant with our 3rd b"h and twice in 48 hours in such conditions is crazy.....

My point is that When I got married I was "starving" yet my wife wasn't filling me up

Now that I have come here and talked to singles and marrieds I have come to understand that beggin pushin and whatever doesn't help what helps is being a good person/husband and get filled like that the other thing is icing on the cake at best nothing more

So my humble opinion thru my experience is that marriage is more of a stumbling block than a help especially if one thinks it is the solution

Whatever you do it should be with Hatzlacha

=====
=====

Re: unmarried lust has no cure.

Posted by MayanHamisgaber - 25 Nov 2017 21:57

Hashem Help Me wrote on 24 Nov 2017 18:03:

I hope some of the single chevra heresees this post. There are guys doing great - I mean some are even in the hundreds of days. Even those with smaller numbers have found methods to control/surrender and really feel good about themselves. Shlomo, 360GYE, Moshiach, (and many more - just i dint remember all the usernames) where are you? Come help this new member.

Shlomo is not really active here anymore but may hve some t'chias hamaisim if someone calls/emails him....

=====
=====

Re: unmarried lust has no cure.
Posted by Shlomo24 - 26 Nov 2017 00:49

Gevura awoke me from the dead for this thread.

Unmarried: You're clearly suffering a lot and in pain. It must be really hard to be in the situation that you are.

I am 22 years old, so I don't have the life experiences that you have, but one thing I know is that single people can recover from lust. I am sober for over a year and I am single. I also have friends who are single and sober.

You can check out my thread (in my signature) for more info and you can contact me with the methods given. I respond.

I hope you find what you are looking for.

P.S: If you don't trust an anonymous forum, then why join in the first place? Sounds a little confusing to me.

=====
=====

Re: unmarried lust has no cure.
Posted by Hashem Help Me - 26 Nov 2017 05:10

Shlomo, thank you for your reappearance, and thank you Gevura for arranging it. Mayan your post hit the nail on the head. Unmarried, most of us here looking back to when we started our recovery process see ourselves in your shoes. We did not believe it could be done. I had times I was acting out a few times a day. I simply did not believe I could ever escape. But as Cordnoy wrote about himself, I also started speaking to people and actually met some of them too and started to see flesh and blood success stories. If you are willing to work you can make it too. By the way, people get better without speaking - some prefer to only chat, email etc. Hatzlocha.

=====
=====