

Make it to Yeshiva

Posted by YeshivaGuy - 04 Aug 2020 05:33

Hi everyone,

First I want to say that I am humbled and honored to be in the presence of such Giborei Koach, true warriors of Hakadosh Baruch Hu.

I bh am not addicted to pornography.

I haven't been on a porn website.

But I'm getting close, and I'm here to gain chizuk not to fall into it.

Once I return to Yeshiva I'm safe, but as long as I'm home I'm in danger, and bh I haven't fallen into pornography. However it's the next step, chalila.

I bh am running a camp, so I started keeping busy, so bh have only been nichshal once in the last 3 weeks.

i want to just express my gratitude to all of you, and my great admiration for each and every one of you.

My Yetzer tries telling me "comon, porn can't be that bad, it's just the word that sounds scary" or like "it can't be so different than YouTube videos"

So I'm here to gain that chizuk.

thank you!

=====

Re: Make it to Yeshiva

Posted by battle-of-the-gen - 18 Jan 2022 14:43

starting wrote on 28 Dec 2021 14:30:

One of my favourite stories is told about the chofetz Chaim when he was talking to bochurim from branowitz

The chofetz Chaim asked the following:

Yaakov avinu, when he heard that Yosef was still alive and in mitzraim, said 'I'll go and see him before I die'. Why did Yaakov have such a burning desire to meet Yosef in this world? They will be together in gan Eden forever?

He answered that when Yaakov heard what Yosef hatzadik had been through and how he had remained so holy in such a place, he knew that even he, Yaakov avinu would not be sitting anywhere close to Yosef in gan Eden and the last chance to be with together would be only on this world.

At this point the chofetz Chaim started crying and he turned to R Elchonon and said, thank you thank you for giving me a chance to see the bochurim of today now, because after they live through the 20th century, there is no way that we will come close to their olam haba.

Any jew that preserves his kedusha in such a world is far far greater than all the gedolim of the past

This was over 100 years ago

If you think it was exaggerated at the time, at least now, in todays world we can start believing it

The problem is that the world has normalised all that is filthy to the extent that we don't appreciate how a healthy human would act and think when the world was how it was designed

We have to start feeling that all we see and hear is not normal. It should not be like this. Then we can start feeling the obviousness of the need to be a real human, to be holy and pure

Hatzlocho

With love

Wow I've heard diff variations of the vort of the challenge of our gen, but this story really hit a spot and gave me goosebumps. Great great story. Thanks for sharing

=====

Re: Make it to Yeshiva

Posted by battle-of-the-gen - 18 Jan 2022 14:44

starting wrote on 28 Dec 2021 14:30:

One of my favourite stories is told about the chofetz Chaim when he was talking to bochurim from branowitz

The chofetz Chaim asked the following:

Yaakov avinu, when he heard that Yosef was still alive and in mitzraim, said 'I'll go and see him before I die'. Why did Yaakov have such a burning desire to meet Yosef in this world? They will be together in gan Eden forever?

He answered that when Yaakov heard what Yosef hatzadik had been through and how he had remained so holy in such a place, he knew that even he, Yaakov avinu would not be sitting anywhere close to Yosef in gan Eden and the last chance to be with together would be only on this world.

At this point the chofetz Chaim started crying and he turned to R Elchonon and said, thank you thank you for giving me a chance to see the bochurim of today now, because after they live through the 20th century, there is no way that we will come close to their olam haba.

Any jew that preserves his kedusha in such a world is far far greater than all the gedolim of the past

This was over 100 years ago

If you think it was exaggerated at the time, at least now, in todays world we can start believing it

The problem is that the world has normalised all that is filthy to the extant that we don't appreciate how a healthy human would act and think when the world was how it was designed

We have to start feeling that all we see and hear is not normal. It should not be like this. Then we can start feeling the obviousness of the need to be a real human, to be holy and pure

Hatzlocho

With love

=====

Re: Make it to Yeshiva

Posted by YeshivaGuy - 21 Jan 2022 20:14

I think I'm gonna go to the Mikva. First time in many months...

=====

Re: Make it to Yeshiva

Posted by OivedElokim - 14 Feb 2022 04:06

How's it going?

=====

Re: Make it to Yeshiva

Posted by YeshivaGuy - 14 Feb 2022 07:40

Thank you for asking and to all those who've reached out despite me not responding.

Im dealing with great pain and trauma. It has caused me to harbour deep hatred towards GD and for awhile I found myself unable to "look Him in the eye."

Now however, due to certain experiences of which some would be inspirational and others stam exciting, I have decided that I am indeed interested in resuming dialogue with the Ribono Shel Olam.

The turning point was a week ago when for the first time in many months I had hisorerus to learn. So I walked 30 min to a kollel, opened a Gemara and burst out crying. I then proceeded to learn the amud with tears rolling down my eyes for an hour with me davening between words-begging Hashem to help me through this/help me not hate be so angry, and I mamash never cry...

Im working my way back. Starting again to daven again etc.

I still need to decide about Yeshiva, whether I should begin my "return" by going to a less intense one. Or try going back to the one I was in before.

All in all, I'm confused, lost, and aimless.

I have no idea where I am, what I am, and where I'm headed. I don't fully know what it is I want out of life. I hope though that GD may guide me and help me, as it is not I who chose to come to this world in the first place.

=====

Re: Make it to Yeshiva

Posted by Vehkam - 14 Feb 2022 11:56

Just wanted to respond to say I feel for you. Hopefully this is the start of a healing process. I am sorry for all your pain.

=====

Re: Make it to Yeshiva

Posted by YeshivaGuy - 14 Feb 2022 13:49

Thanks buddy! It means a lot.

Its very inspiring to see so many guys here continuing and beginning the fight for kedusha.

I wish I would be able to be more involved in the forum, it's just that now I have a different battle that has taken center stage, though I do hope to continue being active here to the best of my ability.

YeshivaGuy

=====
=====

Re: Make it to Yeshiva

Posted by hashemyeracheim613 - 15 Feb 2022 03:45

Yeshiva Guy, I just read your post about crying over the Gemora. I'm speechless. I'm going to make some assumptions here, please forgive me. I assume that you wish those traumatic events never happened. I assume that you don't want to be in so much pain. I assume that you know that there is a benefit to suffering, but you don't want the suffering anyways, despite the benefit. There is one thing that I know for certain. Hashem didn't create a person as incredible as you just to suffer. It's as clear as day that you are something special. Even if you don't see it, everyone here does. The pain is going to end one day, and you are going to bring an awesome light to this world. In fact, you already are. Looking forward to great things.

=====
=====

Re: Make it to Yeshiva

Posted by YeshivaGuy - 15 Feb 2022 04:42

Thanks a lot for the kind words.

Just watched horrible vids/masterbated, as I've done continuously...

Didn't need to, haven't needed to. It's just from boredom.

Wasn't like I was overpowered by taiva. It was a pretty level headed decision to do it....

Gonna try actually fighting now though.

Haven't even thought about doing that.

So no bad vids, erotica in any form, masterbating etc.

I guess once I'm trying to daven again and even learn a shtikl I should make an effort to not watch porn or spill seed when I'm bored.

Hope to rejoin the fight, if I may.

=====
=====

Re: Make it to Yeshiva

Posted by YeshivaGuy - 15 Feb 2022 05:02

hashemyeracheim613 wrote on 15 Feb 2022 03:45:

Yeshiva Guy, I just read your post about crying over the Gemora. I'm speechless. I'm going to make some assumptions here, please forgive me. I assume that you wish those traumatic events never happened. I assume that you don't want to be in so much pain. I assume that you know that there is a benefit to suffering, but you don't want the suffering anyways, despite the benefit. There is one thing that I know for certain. Hashem didn't create a person as incredible as you just to suffer. It's as clear as day that you are something special. Even if you don't see it, everyone here does. The pain is going to end one day, and you are going to bring an awesome light to this world. In fact, you already are. Looking forward to great things.

Thank you so much.

Honestly though, I don't feel special.

Rather I feel like a shadow of a man that "could've been."

And like a weak nebach guy not in yeshiva wasting away his potential.

Its good to hear someone else have a different outlook though, I hope one day to feel the same.

I really just don't want to drown, I don't know whether to give up on frumkeit- relinquishing all the sheifos I had once had, or persevere on this journey to the unknown...

I can't live without GD, as I've learnt. Yet I can't bare the path He has set before me.

??? ???? ????? ??

=====

Re: Make it to Yeshiva

Posted by TheYoungerTwin - 15 Feb 2022 05:51

YeshivaGuy wrote on 15 Feb 2022 05:02:

I really just don't want to drown, I don't know whether to give up on frumkeit- relinquishing all the sheifos I had once had, or persevere on this journey to the unknown...

I can't live without GD, as I've learnt. Yet I can't bare the path He has set before me.

??? ???? ????? ??

I relate to this thought.ive been struggling with this for a while. It truly feels like a "between a rock and hard place" situation. What I came to realize (and this is just my experience), is that there is one problem with this logic. The seemingly impossible path before me was not set by "Him". It was actually set by me. My own warped ideas of how I thought things should be.

In truth, I don't know what the path He set for me is. But I know that it's not based on my false assumptions - at the very least it would be bearable! Forget bearable, the path He set for me is the best path. I just have to get out of my own way.

Are all those sheifos really in line with my place and purpose? Do they reflect who I am, or did I adopt them for some other reason?

Everyone is so unique. Everyone has different roles. Sometimes we may pick up aspirations that are just not for us. And we even go so far to beat ourselves up over not wanting those aspirations.

Just something to think about.

I hope I didn't misinterpret what you wrote.

=====

Re: Make it to Yeshiva

Posted by YeshivaGuy - 15 Feb 2022 13:02

Good point and what you say is indeed true.

What I mean by saying that I “can’t bare the path set before me” is that it’s quite difficult to surmount the challenges I’m currently experiencing while maintaining a semblance of sanity.

Challenges that are by no means self imposed.

If I were to dispose completely of my past sheifos and allow myself to be led solely by this emotional rollercoaster, then I’m afraid I would GD forbid go from not davening to much larger halachik infractions.

Thereby losing the life I truly want to live.

By retaining a memory of how I’ve felt in the past, I recall a part of me that yearns and needs to be connected to GD- grounding me despite these waves of uncertainty.

Your point is still true, applicable, and appreciated.

=====

Re: Make it to Yeshiva

Posted by wilnevergiveup - 15 Feb 2022 13:24

Hey YG, thanks for popping by, it's nice to hear from you from time to time!

Random Q, if you are not in Yeshiva these days, what are you up to? Are you working?

...Honestly though, I don't feel special.

Rather I feel like a shadow of a man that "could've been."

There is this line from Brene Brown "Let go of who you think you should be and embrace who you are." I found it to be powerful, take it or leave it.

=====

Re: Make it to Yeshiva

Posted by YeshivaGuy - 15 Feb 2022 16:24

wilnevergiveup wrote on 15 Feb 2022 13:24:

Hey YG, thanks for popping by, it's nice to hear from you from time to time!

Random Q, if you are not in Yeshiva these days, what are you up to? Are you working?

...Honestly though, I don't feel special.

Rather I feel like a shadow of a man that "could've been."

There is this line from Brene Brown "Let go of who you think you should be and embrace who you are." I found it to be powerful, take it or leave it.

I haven't been working since I haven't felt stable enough to be reliable. I have taken some online courses though and have been working out a lot, but definitely gotta figure stuff out.

As for the quote, it's hard because if I were to embrace who I feel like I am right now then I would be mechalel shabbos, go to a bar and meet a shiksa etc since that's what feels right given my anger etc.

It feels like that's who I am now, but I know it's not who I want to be.

And even that isn't clear anymore, I don't know who I want to be.

What I do know is what I wanted to be a few months ago and since I know I really wanted to be a Ben Torah I won't do radical stuff until things settle down and I can make a rational decision about what I want.

There is truth to the line, it's just very difficult to know when to trust the heart entirely without the mind's restraint.

If you or anyone else can explain what I'm missing I would greatly appreciate it.

=====
=====