thank you geshmak

I'm still not sure if I want because I tried many times in all kind of ways and it worked but then I fell back and the whole thing was a waste

First of all off course you want to change I'll prove it- you came on to gye! Second if you don't change then just look around this forum and you'll see what happens not that you don't know your self the ugly feelings of being were you are now and the GESHMAKAH feelings of being clean... not saying it ain't hard work... it's hell to climb out but it's well we'll worth it brother!! And part of the f2f program will give you motivation to change I think that's week one.

I'm 21

working half day learning half day struggling for a few years now always had problems when I was young but B'h got help from a staff but during covid, I had access to the internet for the first time on my own so I messed up all the hard work from the years before, and now I'm deep into bad stuff that I don't even feel....

(do I need to refresh the page to see if there is a reply or it's auto-sync?

welcome to the forums. Thanks for posting and introducing. You will find many people here with similiar stories to yours. You may be deep into bad stuff, but that certainly does not mess up the hard work from the years before. That can never be taken from you.

The yetzer hara likes to tell you that you are terrible etc.. for the stuff that you are doing. Don't believe it! focus on your positive side in order to start your road to recovery.

wishing you tremendous hatzlocha, vehkam
