Welcome R' Babayakov I'm chasidish too, looking out for you success.

Go through the forum there is alot of wisdom and great tips from our fellow brothers here, great move coming here to the English site, i also didn't find the Yiddish site helpful, I hope there is someone i can talk too about that because i feel that alot of ppl who start there don't get what they need and just drop it and continue to struggle.

Thank you ; Very big problematic I am so ???????? to hashem that he gaved me the brains to coming here and really getting the help I so really need, ???????? everyone should also getting the help they needing, or even better if the yidish site will waking up, but I don't think thats going to happen so quick maybe some of us chasidishe people shoud going there and giving them the contact info from HHM, MUTTEL, and alot other ones here, and just making a lot of posts there to keeping them busy and excited and willing to reaching out to who could really helping them.

That's a fantastic idea! In fact, why don't you discuss this issue with HHM, eerie, and muttel?
They may have other great ideas on how to get the help out there for the yiddish speakers!

Either way, let's figure something out!

There are many people on the English site who speak Yiddish fluently.

Is that something that can be communicated to the yiddish site?

Is there a way for it to be more clear who speaks yiddish around here?

(Maybe they can put it in their signatures?)

Warning: Spoiler!

I think the English site should stay English, but somehow tell the oilam on the yiddish site (who by and large can definitely read 99% of the posts - i mean they figured out how to access the shmutz in English...), that they have who to speak with here that speak their mama lashon, and that "itz okay ta spel evvriting rong".

The problem with the Yiddish site is that its very sheltered, you feel like your back in yeshiva, when you sign up you only get limited access, and after 30 days, (don't know if it's the 30 day chart or just 30 days,) you get full access, except for private message, and married man forum, too this you only get access after doing the 90 day chart,)

This was my experience, I started here first and then i went to the Yiddish, but if I would start there i probably would've feel awful and rejected, and probably wouldn't have get to 72 clean days,

Is this something that can be discussed with the head GYE people?

It's hard for me to imagine them not being open to a conversation...
