Being single has nothing to do with it, and it actually could be harder for married men, which is contrary to popular belief.

Try not to focus on 90 days, its not about the 90 days but the journey we are on one day at a time. 5 days is a huge accomplishment, I remember when I couldn't make 12hrs, and now I am over a year clean. Its about the mindset more than the streak of cleanliness. If you have a 5 day streak then fall, do another 5 then fall, you just were clean for 10 days.

Keep it to One Day At A Time, and remember to get back up because dwelling doesn't really help us.

While I am married, and I appreciate the unique challenges a bachur faces, I must say that I am in touch with many bachurim, and many of them are doing phenomenally, really breaking free in beautiful ways

So, dear bachurim, YOU CAN TOO!!!

Please don't lol about your struggle, you don't deserve to be laughed at for having a hard time, even by yourself

Of course, just trying to keep it light hearted as opposed to being depressed
