I believe that part of you enjoys sharing and making me happy. I really, really do. And so I answer: for the small enjoyment you get.

I know a song too, it's called "Head in the Sand"

Unfortunately, the fact that we are living this year, does not mean we were given "life."

Aren't there any other "sad" things about which we say Shehechyanu? I had something in my mind, but it has flown out.

Thank you, Laag, for sharing with me today. Thank you also for looking it up - did you do that

How is life looking today?

Not familiar with the ?????? ?? maybe you can enlighten us.

Also, which is a bigger weakness feeling horrible or feeling content (or "joy" as you like to say) when looking at naked woman?

I'm very glad you brought this up. This is a big issue for many people. Especially:

-Men

-With family

-In a community environment

-In a Jewish environment

-In an insular (closed) world

In some communities, things like crying or displaying too much emotion are for women only, and to display weakness "puts someone down a peg" in the eyes of others. Sometimes, they judge themselves as weak, and find interesting ways to punish themselves, or justify themselves.

Question: How do you feel about admitting to yourself that you feel horrible, and that it is a weakness?
