"We must remind ourselves that this is our opportunity, the greatest opportunity there ever was. It is not a trap to get us to mess up. It is what were put on the planet for."

when we remind ourselves of the above, we can change our perspective from someone that is struggling to overcome desire to a totally different perspective of someone that is grabbing opportunities.

this really works if you build up a passion to grab those opportunities....

DAY 4: (Pages 21-23)

Chapter 2 (First Half):

Very nice message, again pounding in that its the challenge that is rewarded, not necessarily the success a the end, that fact that you're trying is a success.

PUBLIC SERVICE ANNOUNCEMENT:

I'm going home for an off-shabbos, so I won't be online over the next couple of days, so here's the readings for those days:

Friday: Pages 24-27

Shabbos: 29-31

Sunday: 32-34

I will still see what everyone posts, it goes to my email, and I look forward tp reading it.

Sorry I haven't been on so much lately, but this thread needs some chizuk now!

Chapter 5 (Second Half, pages 48-50)

I love the message: Hashem loves you, know matter how far you might think you are, He is still there rooting for you, and is proud of every single accomplishment.

I hope everyone else is keeping up, I'd love to hear where everyone is holding.

Chapter 7: (Pages 58-61)

A beautiful point, that a large help in this struggle is a knowledge of HaShem. A big cheilek of how to start succeeding in this struggle is realizing that He loves you fully. The idea at the end to add a little English part at the end of Shmoneh Esrei is an amazing Eitzah, I've been doing it for a couple of years after seeing it in the first Drasha of the Yaaros Dvash and its extremely powerful.

I want to hear where everyone else is holding and what they have to say!

A lot of great insights. Going to try to catch up and keep with the "cycle'.

Gotta be mechapaper for missing yesterday, will keep on top of today.

Chapter 8-9: (Pages 66-71)

I like the description of the Yetzer Hara's ploys at the beginning of Chapter 9, its so true. It makes you feel like you're missing out, even though your Seichal tells you that you've done this so many times before and haven't gained a thing

I want to hear what everyone else has to say, I can hear the crickets!

Exactly.

I'm always making excuses. I just need to see this new thing, and curious about that I have yet to see etc, but every time I give in it's the same aftermath. Regret, nothing new.

Yes I enjoy, but it didn't give me anything new. Same old lust, that will never be satiated. Yet the wheel continues to turn.

My Yetzer Hora always gets in the door with curiosity, too. I am insatiably curious.

Maybe that's why Shlomo emphasizes that its important to know that there's really nothing new.

It's the same corpse - with new makeup. She's beckoning to me tonight - but she can rot without me joining her. I'm running aways from her now... Going someplace safe without a computer.....

Chapter 9: (Pages 72-74)

A very powerful message. The way to beat the Yetzer Hara's tricks is to flip everything around. It makes you think that you're missing out when you exercise your self control and don't give in. So what are you supposed to do? You're supposed to be excited and pumped that you succeeded! Its incredible that you made it! If you have that excitement, you didn't miss out on a thing!

Chapter 11: (Pages 89-91)

This chapter describes the experience of hitting rock bottom, and the perspective that oftentimes one can take that experience and use it to flip around their lives. Its very powerful.

Looking forward to everyone else!
