Chapter 22: Pages 168-170

“Mitzvos done despite difficulty are not “just a little better” than mitzvos done with ease. They are infinitely greater.

Growing up in the 21st century, we face many challenges. Immorality is rampant. From a young age, we learn about how amazing it is to run after our desires, and it is so easy to indulge. For us to prevail in any of the challenges we are bombarded with, we must go against our nature. Though this means we face great danger, it doesn't mean we are at a disadvantage. Rather, we have a tremendous opportunity to become great.”
