Filter help

I'm sure this isn't the first post so I apologize for not finding one of those. First of all, I know that a filter isn't the final solution to everything. If you want to get in trouble, you will find it and you have to learn how to hold back. But I would love to find a filter that will entirely entirely black images and it shouldn't be easy to unblock them. Techloq and nativ usa do a decent job, but not perfect. Wizmage is does what I need but with a click of the button you can view everything blocked. I need it to be harder to allow access to images than that.

I have good filters and truple, but keep on finding myself searching hard and finding devarim asurim to different levels depending on level of urges and how much siyata desitra achra there is.

a lot going on by me and sure that's all part of it. It's absurd this keeps on happening. BH m isn't an issue.

As someone who knows a thing or two about computers and technology this sounds very familiar as I would always struggle with finding loopholes in the filter and being able to view images and content that weren't exactly appropriate.

Finally it hit me that a better mode of protection would be to rather block the entire site instead of having it open and possibly exposing me to its images and content.

So the way I have it setup is that every website is blocked and by that I mean everything even the "clean" stuff. I can't even do a Google search! My wife has the code and will only open up a site temporarily if I really need it open (even then with the image & video filters turned on.) It's quite annoying to say the least but it's what I need in order to continue this battle. If this can work for you I would highly recommend it. It has helped me not just in the Kosher sense but in the time wasting sense as well.

Hope this helps!

Thanks! I would love to do something like that, but my wife has no idea of my struggles and has no understanding of why I'm so "fanatic" about the internet so I try my best to leave her out of it.

There is a feature that allows a designated admin to have control of some/all requests made on the block page. They would have to approve it even if the filter initially allows it.

Hope this helps.

Maybe try Netfree. They have humans filtering all images.

I was told that geder is the best for this but I know nothing about them. On their website they only mention skin-tone blocking so I don't know whether what this person said is true.

I asked Geder the following question, "Do you have the option of blocking all images even if they are modest without an easy way of unblocking them?" They responded, yes, we do have this option. You can also ask the filter company you are using whether they have this option. My guess is that no filter is perfect.

Today much worse what looked at. And for awhile when I had a lot of things need to be done.

nearly all of my struggles come from going back to going on to a site that I think this time I will be OK and safe even though I have done bad things on them countless times.

I need to have accountability partner who can approve any site I want to unblock. I need someone who's on the internet often let's say for work etc, that they'd be able to approve things for me within few hours.

if you're available to help please email me at jew613613613@gmail.com

You have to find a way to have the motivation not to bypass a filter that is stronger than your desire to do so. Try reading The Battle of the Generation and doing the Core Values and Three Questions exercises in the Flight to Freedom Program. The link to the book is in my signature.

Maskim, based on too much experience:(.

additionally though, there should be some way to block the loophole assuming you've got a good filter. Tell your filter company the issue and ask for help. I've done it more than once and have been very happy for doing so. If they can't and it's a big loophole may be worth looking into different filter that can help.

and then as mentioned, an overall strengthening yourself so you won't try and find a loophole again.
