stillgoing, I admire you as one of the martyrs of Judaism, like the ones who must initially listen to the kol isha music in order to make the frum cover versions.

Actually they all are.

1)I had to go to the salon for my pre-seirah haircut. When I finished eating the pizza I had to put the crust somewhere. Inoticed a space in the haircut machine. Long story short, it was a terrible idea.

2) Me protecting myself from the alien mind reading rays. I wear it all year round but my family pretends it's a pesach thing. Whatever, they're going to be mind slaves. See if I care.

3) Me after you gave me mussar for hitting someone with a broom.

4) For the pesach seder I dress up like that and hit everyone (not hard enough to make a chaburah, I'm not crazy) so they can feel like they're really leaving mitzryaim.

I'm starting to worry about my anonymity. Should I post my social as well?

Don't forget about inna's response to your above question. (oh, and inna says hi (I think))

Israel banned the sale of fur to the fashion industry on Wednesday, becoming the first country in the world to do so, The Jerusalem Post reported.

“The fur industry causes the deaths of hundreds of millions of animals worldwide, and inflicts indescribable cruelty and suffering,” Environmental Protection Minister Gila Gamliel said in a statement after signing the measure.

“Using the skin and fur of wildlife for the fashion industry is immoral and is certainly unnecessary. Animal fur coats cannot cover the brutal murder industry that makes them.

Signing these regulations will make the Israeli fashion market more environmentally friendly and far kinder to animals,” she said.

The U.S. state of California implemented a similar ban in 2019, but despite numerous demands to do so, no other state or country followed suit.

The animal rights NGO Animals Now welcomed Wednesday’s news: “We have been fighting for years to ban the sale of furs to the fashion industry, and from the start, 86% of the Israeli public supported this.

“We thank Minister Gamliel and Tal Gilboa, the prime minister’s adviser on animal rights, and our partners in the struggle over years, Let The Animals Live and the International Anti-Fur Coalition.”
