

Practical kabbalah for the masses

Posted by inastruggle - 17 May 2013 23:37

hey emu,

remember when you were the lawyer in that case of the blood libel?

(Disclaimer: this thread is in no way intended to make litzanos of any part of yiddishkeit, it is meant solely for the purpose of being mesameach yidden and giving anyone who needs a kosher outlet a place to write. thank you for your understanding and cooperation) shedim don't have a 'babua debabua' so i dunno if they would show up on skype btw, can anyone explain what exactly a 'babua debabua' is? i never understood it...

My father told me that they don't have two shadows when two lights are shining on them from different directions.

maybe that's what it means.

did we just upgrade the thread to a beis medrash thread?

here goes,

addictions (i think)

wait a second, wasn't ashmadei an alchoholic?

that's how he got caught by Shlomo hamelech since he couldn't stop himself from getting drunk.

(ok maybe that's not pshat...)

I don't know too much yiddishe demons but goyishe ones

don't have:

sodium issues (since salt chases them away)

or tradition soups (along the same line of reasoning)

or leichters (since silver chases them away)

or menorahs (along the same line of reasoning)

2 intersecting shadow do not constitute a shadow of a shadow. vedok.

maybe i should write a letter to R' Chaim Kanievsky asking pshat and btw, demons shake like galeh if you sing the viznitzer menucha vesimcha (maybe)

I always understood "Babua" to mean "reflection" rather than "shadow". So I maybe it means that you cant see its reflection in a second mirror. Artsroll anyone?
