

Daily Quote - Be Inspired

Posted by stillgoing - 03 May 2016 03:15

I did the best at the yeshiva that everyone told me i would fail in.

It's the last day of sheva brochos, so i need to cram all of these marriage quotes in before we get back to 'real' life. There are three left.

Just got married?

The threads gotta deal with it sometime, and i'm sure that someone must have just gotten married.

I was hesitant to post this, since i don't want it to be taken the wrong way. I really do not mean the double meaning.

Hmmmm. I don't agree. It goes for good wives also that a good wife doesn't make a good husband.

Shlomo24 is actually right. The picture says that he will make her a good wife just by being a good husband. It does not actually work so simply.

Just got married?

If a newly married guy doesn't remember his anniversary, there's a different set of problems happening.

This one was so good I downloaded it to show it to my wife.

We laughed about it...and then that night I noticed myself acting like the jerk in the cartoon.

Thank you!!!!

Granted - you are right, that one spouse can not control the other. There are however, many things that one can do that will greatly effect their spouse. A husband who acts in a kind caring manner, or a good wholesome way, creates an environment where the wife wants to follow suit. Of course, there can be other factors that can change things differently, but generally speaking, this does work.

Mirrerr, ayen l'el (see above). I surrender. :-)

Unlike the picture of me above, trying to remember my anniversary.
