

The Grouchery: Haven for the Grumpily Disgruntled

Posted by youknowwho - 08 Mar 2024 15:01

Speaking to a few friends offline gave birth to this idea, it seems to be an urgent and immediate necessity.

Welcome to...The Grouchery: Haven for the Grumpily Disgruntled

This thread is a place where one can feel free to rant, vent and gripe.

It is a safe haven for negativity, sourness and blahness.

It is a place where one can be sure to find a healthy dose of demotivating advice. It is a place where any kind of positivity is strictly forbidden.

It is a place where you can vent about what a rotten day you're having and not worry that people will then reach out with concerned pm's/texts...cuz nobody really cares. And that's perfectly fine, why should anybody care?

Please Remember:

-No profanity (Sadly)

-No personal insults (Sadly)

- Absolutely no: Nice, positive, warm, loving, optimistic, motivational, supportive or inspiring posts. (Not sadly)

Enter at your own risk!

Delete one stupid account in rage and depression and they make you start all over again. What a pain in the neck. The sign on wouldn't take any of my fake email addresses, I can't edit my old posts, and there's no 90 day chart till you watch F2F.

On the bright side, I figured out what's going on with all the weird username (sparklingdonkey83 etc). That's the default suggestion generated so unless you choose a name you get stuck as a fantasticgirrafe99. Was very tempting to be hopelessworm666 but I resisted that urge (only urge I've resisted this week lol).

Gotta love that fellow, saunters up to the bimah for hagbah (yes, another rant about hagbah), opens the ??? to at least 6 columns, and then doesn't even give the whole shul a view!

Warning: Spoiler!

On that point why do more then half of people who do haggbah do this half turn and back thing.
Spin all the way around.

There is actually a (real) reason for this.

On one hand, you're always supposed to turn to your right (especially in shul), but on the the other hand, you wanna show the people on the right side of the shul first- which requires turning to the left.

So what some people do is simply turn a full circuit, going to the right. Others try to do a sort of quarter turn to the left-showing the people on the right, then go and turn all the way way around, right-wise.

Others still do the quarter turn to the left, 3/4 turn to the right, and then promptly get hated on in The Grouchery for messing up over of the biggest honors of ????? ?????.

Warning: Spoiler!

And then there's that guy who does the partial turns and then also the full spin just for good measure. He's the same guy that shuffles side-to-side afterwards looking for the chair. I think he just wants to hold the Torah up for as long as possible. The poor gelila bochur in the meantime is on his 3rd time stepping forward and the ducking back out of the way.

And then you have the guy doing hagbah in a shul with a low ceiling and bangs the Torah once, and keeps spinning around and his the ceiling again like he forget there's a low ceiling...

I think that is the best way, 1/4 to left, then 1 and 1/4 to the right.

About bumping into the ceiling, at least they are avoiding the Arur of those who barely lift it up high (chas veshalom)

And why does it seem to be a minhag to have a chandelier right above the bimah- ESPECIALLY in shuls with short ceilings? Do they WANT us to make the chandelier look like a carousel???
