well, we know the media is controlled by left-wing animal-rights activists who hug trees and keep pet whales

the only reliable way to get info these days is to ask the shammas who sells cholent, wine, kugel, suspenders and Shmuz cd's outside the mikva...

public service reminder:

if you didn't get to make 'shlissel-challah', you can still throw a piece of beef in the cholint, because a cow is a 'key' in yiddish, so you can make 'shlissel-cholint' t's not a big deal to wash strawberries- bowl of soap etc. alternately, pure'ing'll do the trick and provide a delicate and fresh undertone...

indeed, however, rhubarb would be a most welcome addition jeez cholent is getting very fruity these days.

let's get back to MEAT AND POTATOS raboisay anyone ever tried lamb in cholent? thinking of putting one in. hooves and all.
