Absoutly. I didn't mean it addressed to those on this site. I meant it more that someone else here would write it to all his ~~admirers~~ critics.

perhaps there are some other words in this post that should merit being crossed out and being rewritten correctly?

Now listen, i used to write perfectly (well, almost - don't ask cords) on this site. Then i switched to moble and there is no spell check plus each letter has to be written separatly (gasp!). On other apps (email, messaging) the phone finishes off the word, but not here. Put spell check on moble and i'll make ~~america~~ the posts great again.

yup. you can't trust moble.

so you know my sweet little friends, i hope you can see, you and your children, me and my children, all of us together, lemme tell you this story about the gabbai of the Ropzhitzer Rebbe.

he wasn't a very smart man, which is why the Rebbe liked him, so the Rebbe could do things and not worry that people would see his true madreigos. anyway, one day in shul someone got up and said "hatodah ve'keil nazir...", and everyone started laughing, including the gabbai. everyone was sure that the gabbai did not 'get' the joke so they asked him why he's laughing. he says "he's a fool, in middle of davening you can say Hashem's name...."

I wanted to use this to lighten up the daf yomi crowd (suffering thru nazir now), but I couldn't.....

Warning: Spoiler!

It's been 3 years... and I still didn't get it...

Did you?

Warning: Spoiler!

First of all, why would the nazir need to bring his karma?,

But mainly, if that was the joke, I indeed 'got' it 3 years ago. I thought that there was something
