Clean for about 5 minutes now, do I count today as 1 or 0?

Good one Me3.

And, there are some owners of sukkahs,

who ask others to come and help them put it up.

Whether at the start or after being blown down.

Some sukkas were falling apart, and then all the friends came and helped lift it all back up.

Welcome to GYE :D

So I actually managed to find my own thread, excuse me while I get rid of the dust and open some windows here.

Today I hit 90 days, now just like that poof! I have no more desire to look at inappropriate sites. Amazing!

OK fine maybe not.

So what did I accomplish?

The internet hit me hard, when I left yeshiva and went to work, and was exposed to high speed internet, it was a disaster.

Not at first, but as I became bored with my job and needed something to amuse myself, I fell in hard.

I've wasted countless hours destroying my soul.

I promised to myself I would improve.

I made nedarim.

I stopped going online except for 1 or 2 sites.

I tried everything

And nothing helped. Sure I stopped, like a smoker quits a thousand times.

Could be I stopped for 90 days in the past (I never counted).

So what's different now?

Maybe nothing.

Maybe something.

Story is still in progress.

What I've done is

1. Installed k9 and I don't have the password (wish I had something for my phone).
2. I've found a solution for boredom, it's called GYE. Not only does it keep me busy and give me chizuk it allows me an opportunity to rectify some of my wrongdoings by helping others who are struggling.

And finally it allows me an avenue to write poems and to really communicate my deepest emotions and to gush forth....Oh wait, nevermind, that wasn't me.

There were a couple of posts recently that were as gut wrenching as they were provocative.

They had me thinking about parents and children.

1. The ability to procreate has everything to do virility of a male and fertility of a female.

It does not magically grant either of the two parties involved special insight into human nature or the ability and knowledge to raise children. To raise children one needs to be involved in their lives,

a lot of prayer, a lot of luck? more prayer, more involvement, patience, more patience, etc.

2. How many people on this site (And not yet on this site, but should be on this site) were raised religious instilled ostensibly with religious values, keep shabbos, kosher, daven 3 times a day, learn, etc.

And still are closet addicts. Did my (yours/ours) parents fail? Did they fail to instill in me some core key ideas that I could have utilized in fighting my yetzar hara, something that would have prevented from ever falling? Or was I predisposed to this despite their best intentions and the fact that I'm posting here and battling my yetzar a measure of their success.

me

3. What can I do better to raise my own children to keep them pure, religious and happy?

Since you decided to lock Uri's thread, I had to dig out mine. With all due respect Uri does seem to have taken down his blog. Try clicking on the older posts that are not on the first page of the blog. While we do understand that a lot of decisions are made for the best of the members here, we can't help but be concerned about him.

(SB, yes I do have a thread

I just went to his blog, and saw posts as early as December 21, 2009, and as recent as January 15, 2010.
