Bottom of the second!

End of Day 2

There is absolutely no mitzvah to listen to braided tchalmy girls jabbering in yiddish, [no matter how commendable it is to speak a jewish language, and for unmarried girls to braid their hair] but there definitely is a mitzva to listen to this!

Another day another mitzvah. But what i also find to be true, is that another day means really another day, another life, another joy, insight, pain is there for a moment, then comes freeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeedom.

All the best to you!

Relax, you are not missing the whole point.

I'll try to explain. In AA they say that you can't get better until you hit "rock bottom" (that is you are totally defeated and desperate). Only then do you have the ability to admit that you are "powerless" and need "a higher power" to help you.

GYE tries to help people before they hit "bottom", to kind of "hit bottom" without really hitting bottom. Meaning to realize they need help without having to lose a job, get divorced, etc. So they come to the realization of hitting bottom while still on top and not suffering to the point of desperation.

Does that explain it?

Is it just me who thinks that some of the previous post is wholly inappropriate on this forum?

I think that some of the post is wholly inappropriate for any yid to be thinking.

Ever.

But sometimes I think some of the same, similar, or worse, thoughts. Even though I look like a nice ben torah and learn in a top yeshiva and do chessed and learn mussar and....

Leanyus daati, thinking inappropriate thoughts and wanting things that are not necessarily kosher are things that happen. Yeah, sometimes I think about how much easier it would be to just go to college, bum out, start smoking, quit gye, try drugs, maybe kill someone, or at least hope he dies soon. Thinking these things may not happen to everyone, but it probably happens to a lot more people than you'd think.

I don't think that tz meant that he actually wants to go off the derech or kill someone just that sometimes he thinks about it and "seriously" considers it. He was just being honest about the frustrations of life and what they sometimes cause him to think and imagine quite seriously sometimes. I'm more impressed about how he yearns for true shteiging which I can't say I do as much (for sure not the wide strukus and gartel).
